FRENCH AND BRITISH ARGUMENT REFERRED TO STEERING GROUP

Committee Will Be Named; Opinion
Differs

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The old controversy between France and Great Britain as to whether naval limitation should be effected on the basis of global tonnage or by categories was thrown on the table at the first fully open plenary session of the London naval arms conference today.

It was discussed by the spokesmen of all five powers at the conference save Japan. Then on the motion of Secretary of State Stimson, it was referred to steering committee which will consider the question.

Although it has not been decided definitely, the committee probably will consist of two delegates from each power but its personnel was specifically left indefinite in order to give elasticity to its makeup.

No matter how many members each nation will have on the committee, there will be only one vote.

TALKED TOO LOUD
LONDON, Jan. 30.—Ambassador Charles G. Dawes and Senator Joseph T. Robinson and David A. Reed were "called down" today by a British foreign office official at St. James' Palace for talking too loud.

During the translation of Premier Andre Tardieu's speech before the plenary session in Queen Anne's drawing room, the three American delegates remained in an adjoining chamber with newspapermen. They spoke so loudly the official was forced to ask them politely to lower their voices in order that journalists here had work to do could hear the translation coming over a loud speaker in the room.

This wasn't the only interruption. At another time during the session, the palace guard was changed in the courtyard outside the room assigned to newspapermen, and the blare of the band for some minutes drowned out the loud-speakers entirely.

for each nation so nothing will be effected by it except by unanimous vote.

The first public session of the conference revealed that there are still wide differences of opinion, but all present expressed optimism at its conclusion that agreement was in sight on the basis of the proposal which will allow a limited percentage of transfer of credit of the smaller categories.

Premier Ramsay MacDonald, with ultra optimism, expressed his views of the progress made to correspondents as follows:
"I think we are now within measurable distance of solving the problem which up to now has not been solvable. I do not say that we are agreed as yet, but I think this committee will report agreement."

"The differences between us are so small that were you to put a candle to them, you could see through the wall of controversy."

MacDonald emphasized, however, that Great Britain could not accept the global tonnage theory as now proposed, saying:

"Under it you would never get peace, quiet or contentment. There

BISHOP ANDERSON, HEAD OF EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SUCCUMBS

Primate Of America
Victim Of Heart
Trouble

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Bishop Charles P. Anderson, primate of the Episcopal Church of the United States, died here today following a heart attack several days ago.

Bishop Anderson was stricken January 21 and had been confined to his bed since. For the past decade he had been hailed as one of the greatest preachers in America and one of the outstanding figures in his church to which he was elected presiding bishop last November.

Bishop Anderson was born in Kempton, Canada, September 8, 1861 and was educated at Trinity School, Port Hope, Ontario, and Trinity University, Toronto where he received his degree of doctor of divinity in 1900.

He married Miss Janet Glass of Belleville, Ont., in 1889. In 1887 he was made a deacon and the following year a rector. He was consecrated bishop of Chicago in 1900.

COLUMBUS WILL GET AIR LINES OFFICES

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 30.—Ohio's capital may be the aviation center of the central states, it was indicated here today following an announcement of T. A. T. Maddux, Air Lines official, that the company's headquarters will be moved to Columbus.

The eastern division's operation offices have consolidated and the move will be effective Saturday, the officials announced. The traffic offices of the eastern division will remain at St. Louis, under the direction of J. W. Brennan, it was stated.

St. Clair D. Welsh, former eastern division superintendent, will be in charge of the offices here to succeed John A. Collins, who recently announced his resignation.

The change will be made as an economy measure as a result of the recent reductions in fares on the passenger air line, it was said.

The action was decided upon at a meeting of the board of directors when J. L. Maddux, organizer and president of the Maddux Lines, was elected to head the T. A. T. Maddux line merger.

REMOVE DIVER FROM RIVER AFTER BEING TRAPPED 69 HOURS

Believe Trans Dead; Fear Icy Water Would Be Fatal

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 30.—Peter Trans, deep sea diver who for sixty-nine hours was trapped at the bottom of the Outarde River in an isolated section 175 miles from Quebec was brought to the surface at 7:30 this morning, according to word reaching here today.

Whether Trans was dead or alive could not be immediately determined. A doctor began an examination at once.

Word that Trans had been brought to the surface was received at 9:20 this morning by Harold Nelson, manager of the Ontario Paper Company, employers of Trans. The information came in a telegram over the lone telephone wire which has been in operation at brief intervals to Point Outarde, near the scene. Trans had submerged at 10:30 o'clock Monday. His diving apparatus became entangled and he was unable to come up.

Rescue divers had worked all night in the chilled waters of the river in desperate attempts to bring the imprisoned man to the surface. The divers had been rushed by airplane to the scene.

The body of Trans was found through a pocket in the crib under which Trans had been tightly lodged for practically three days and nights.

Although the telegram did not give the result of the doctor's examination Nelson expressed the opinion that Trans was brought up dead.

The belief was held that it would be a miracle if the diver, imprisoned so long in the icy waters, was still alive. Efforts were made immediately to obtain more information from the scene.

Trans is thirty-eight years old, a native of Finland. He came to Canada in 1928, leaving behind a wife and two sons, Elmer and Peter.

For the last twenty-four hours Mrs. Trans was being advised by cable of the progress of the rescue work.

Just before Trans submerged for the last time at 10:30 Monday morning he had come to the surface and asked that his ladder be moved. A few minutes later he reported his work was going well. And then—suddenly—his signals ceased.

WILL ARRAIGN "GUN FIEND" ON CHARGES

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 30.—Edward W. Ralph, 18, confessed "gun fiend," who admitted the shooting of two young women here last month, was to be arraigned in police court today on a charge of shooting with intent to kill.

The youth confessed, according to police, that he shot Miss Beatrice Gallagher and Mrs. Mary Pshock after they had repulsed his advances when accosted on the street. Ralph persistently denies, however, that he was the "murderer" who shot and fatally wounded Miss Janet Blood, 16-year-old high school student.

The gun used by Ralph in his attacks was found yesterday and ballistic experts were to compare photographs of the bullet fired from the pistol with those taken from the two victims' bodies. But, extracted from Miss Blood's body, will also be compared to determine whether or not Ralph was the murderer of the high school student.

Genaro, after the shooting, staggered to a hospital and collapsed. Physicians gave him only a few hours to live.

Heretofore, the code of gangland called for no one to ever name an attacker. This case baffled police in their attempts to solve hundreds of gang murders.

One police official said today: "It is better that Genaro died, by naming his slayers he sealed his death warrant."

OHIO COMMERCIAL BOWLERS GATHER

CLEVELAND, Jan. 30.—Completing the annual Cleveland automobile show now in progress here, members of the Ohio Association of Commercial Bowlers met today to discuss automotive conditions throughout the nation.

Following extensive reports of officers and an address of welcome by Ray Wagner of Springfield, O., president, T. C. Burneson, attorney-examiner of the Public Utilities Commission, was to present a report of committees during the past year. T. C. Snyder of Indianapolis, was also scheduled to speak.

Questions of costs, rates and maintenance expenses will dominate the discussions of the group this afternoon, it was announced.

ONE DEAD, TWO HURT IN GASOLINE EXPLOSIONS

FRESNO, Cal., Jan. 30.—One man is dead today, two are injured and four are missing as the result of two terrific explosions which destroyed the $500,000 absorption plant and gasoline storage tanks of the Petroleum Securities Company at Kettleman Hills late last night.

Charles L. Phillips, operator in charge of the night shift, is known to have been killed in the first blast, which was heard three miles away.

Flaming gasoline showering on the storage tanks caused a second explosion which shook the countryside. Flames shooting high in

ICE GORGES BLAMED FOR INDIANA FLOOD STATUS; MANY DEAD

Families Marooned Without Food Or Shelter

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 30.—With only the roofs of farm houses showing above the flood waters in many sections of Posey County, relief forces today attempted to battle the advance of the most alarming flood of Indiana's history.

Ice gorges in the Wabash River are causing the flood waters to spread with unprecedented rapidity across the lowlands south of New Harmony, Ind.

Sections of Illinois also are fighting the water's advance.

No complete estimate of the sickness, suffering and damage is available, but aviators carrying food to the territory report the ice-laden waters have already covered a section fifteen miles wide.

Near New Harmony twelve families are marooned without food and with little shelter. Ten persons are isolated in a house on Ribeyre Island in the Wabash.

These, together with a score of sufferers on cut off islands were given food yesterday by aviators who dropped the supplies in small parachutes.

Stories brought here by residents who escaped the flood tide indicated that barns and homes are filled with ice. Farm animals have been frozen in their stalls and many residents are believed to have died in their homes from starvation and exposure, but Red Cross workers are unable to reach the more remote places because of treacherous ice fields and strong currents.

SILENCE CODE IS VIOLATED

Shot Bomber Names His Assailant

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—(Gangland's code of silence was violated for the first time in the history of Chicago crime today when Johnny Genaro, gunman and hoodlum, in a dying gasp named James Belcastro, indicted bomber and racketeer, as the man who "put him on the spot" here last night.

Genaro also named Louis de Lucca and Angelo Lucchi as the two men who riddled his body with bullets.

Genaro, after the shooting, staggered to a hospital and collapsed. Physicians gave him only a few hours to live.

Heretofore, the code of gangland called for no one to ever name an attacker. This case baffled police in their attempts to solve hundreds of gang murders.

One police official said today: "It is better that Genaro died, by naming his slayers he sealed his death warrant."

RIVER TOWBOAT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

POINT PLEASANT, W. Va., Jan. 30.—The towboat Clyde which has been plying between Pittsburgh and Memphis lies in "Davey Jones' Locker" in the Ohio River today after a fire which virtually destroyed the craft last night.

The blaze of an unknown origin swept through the superstructure of the Clyde so rapidly that it was thought that other river craft might be endangered. The moving lines of the burning vessel drifted down the river near Gallipolis where it sank.

Damage was estimated at $80,000.

COUNSEL FOR OWNER SEEKS INJUNCTION IN APPEALS COURT

Would Prevent Sheriff
From Interfering With Operation

A suit seeking to obtain a test ruling on the legality of the operation of mint-vending machines in Greene County was filed in the Greene County Court of Appeals Thursday by Attorney F. L. Johnson, Xenia, on behalf of Walker Zimmerman, Clinton County.

The injunction suit, naming Oliver Tate, as sheriff of Greene County, defendant, was originally filed in Common Pleas Court Wednesday and sought to prevent the sheriff from carrying out an order Monday of Probate Judge S. C. Wright, who held that two slot machines confiscated by authorities at Rest Haven Park, Dayton Pike, last December 12, are gambling devices and directed that they be destroyed.

The action also asked that Sheriff Tate be enjoined from further confiscation of the machines installed in Greene County.

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy dismissed the petition when he sustained a demurrer filed by Prosecuting Attorney J. Carl Marshall.

Probate Judge Wright had given his recent order in deciding an application filed January 22 by Zimmerman demanding return of the two machines on the ground they were his property and were not gambling devices. He asserted the machines were being operated at Rest Haven Park under contract and that if the law was violated it was without his knowledge.

In the test suit filed in the Appellate Court Thursday Zimmerman disclosed that he is in business purchasing and selling candy mints in Greene County and asserts that he has expended a substantial sum of money in buying mints and equipment for the distribution and sale of the mints. The vending machines, he claims,

TWO KILLED BY NITRO BLAST

Torpedo Workers Are Blown to Bits

FINDLAY, O., Jan. 30.—An investigation was launched here today by officials of the Independent Eastern Torpedo Company, to determine the cause of a nitroglycerine explosion in a storage plant, which killed two employees.

S. Williams Lawwell, 38, and Curtis C. Coyne, 55, were blown to bits by the explosion, which occurred on the company's property near here late yesterday.

The bodies of the two men were picked up in pieces from a wide area surrounding the spot of the explosion. The two men were riding in a truck to the storage plant and a small piece of the truck was all that remained of the vehicle.

The heat which was caused by the blast, melted the snow within a radius of one acre, shattering windows in nearby farm buildings and rocked houses in Findlay. Pieces of the wrecked storage plant were found 800 feet away.

BOSTON DRYDOCK IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

BOSTON, Jan. 30.—A four alarm fire in the old drydock of the Atlantic works in East Boston, one of the most spectacular waterfront fires in years, which burned down midnight until after dawn today, did damage estimated at $100,000.

Two hundred families in nearby tenements were ordered to leave as a precautionary measure, and sailors at the Charleston navy yard were held in readiness to aid the fire-fighters if the need arose.

SEARS ROEBUCK IN STOCK MARKET RISE

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Sears Roebuck led the upward movement in the stock market at the opening today, with a 4 1/4 point jump to 99 1/2. United States Steel was up 5/8 at 182 3/8, the highest price on the current move. Johns-Manville advanced 1 1/8 to 137 1/4; International Harvester a point to 91 1/2 and Dupont 3/4 at 120.

The market was active and strong in every section, with a better demand for the oils, motors, copers a 1-8 specialties Chrysler Motor sold up 1-8 at 35 3/8. General Motors up 1/2 at 41 1/2.

CONGRESS TO PROBE CHAIN AND BRANCH BANKING SITUATION

Revision Of National Banking Laws In Prospect

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The legislative path was cleared today for a sweeping congressional inquiry into chain and branch banking, with prospects of a revision of the national banking laws being considered before the end of the present session.

Rep. Louis T. McFadden (R) of Pennsylvania announced that the house banking committee has reached an agreement with the treasury and the federal reserve board under which they will cooperate with the committee in the investigation.

The house committee will formally request that experts be assigned to aid it in making its inquiry and drafting legislation. The committee docket is to be cleared of virtually all other business, and members relieved of the necessity of attending house sessions.

With the treasury recommending that the national banking laws be liberalized to permit further extension of branch banking by national banks, many militant members of congress have announced that they in turn will seek repeal of the McFadden act which permitted limited branch banking.

Congress has already been warned by treasury officials that unless the national bank laws are liberalized, the banking resources of the country will soon be mobilized in chains formed to evade laws.

SHERIFF FAILS TO LOCATE DERELICT

SANDUSKY, O., Jan. 30.—After an unsuccessful two-hour search by airplane for a derelict rum craft carrying the frozen body of a man which was reported found Tuesday in the ice wastes off the western tip of Pelee Island, authorities today were attempting to check the origin of the report.

Sheriff John W. Parker personally conducted the airplane search for the craft yesterday. Accompanied by Pilot Joe Esch, Sheriff Parker flew over Canadian Lake Erie, less than a radius of twenty miles of Pelee Island, but found neither a derelict launch nor traces of where such a craft had been removed.

"We absolutely failed to verify the rumors," the sheriff declared. Upon first receipt of the rumor it was believed that the reported derelict craft could possibly be that of the Gray Ghost, a notorious rum launch which cleared from Erie, Ont., last Jan. 9 with 160 cases of liquor and mysteriously disappeared.

BATTLE TO CONTROL CHECKER CAB LEADS TO DOUBLE SLAYING

Barney J. Mitchell, Company Treasurer, Revenge Victim

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Barney J. Mitchell, treasurer of the Checker Taxicab Company, and George Jackson, driver, were shot and killed today by unknown assassins who commandeered their cab in the heart of the exclusive Rogers Park section.

Reconstruction of the crime by police indicates Mitchell was slain as a possible outcome of strife that has been noticeable within the organization recently. Jackson, authorities believe, was killed on the "dead men tell no tales" theory.

Mitchell was found in the rear of the car, on his knees as if imploring his killers to spare him. Five bullets had entered his body.

Jackson was slumped over the wheel with one bullet in his head. It was apparent that the man who shot Jackson held the pistol directly against his head. The cab's motor and meter were still running.

It is believed the assassins trailed Mitchell's cab from his office. When they struck the residential district where the killing took place they must have fired a warning shot to stop the cab as a bullet hole was found through the back of it.

Then, the police believe, the gunmen got out and approached the cab. One of the men, it was indicated, stepped up and placed a gun against the back of Jackson's head, ordering him to keep his eyes to the front. The others pulled open the rear door and confronted Mitchell. It was evidenced from the position of Mitchell's body that he dropped to his knees to plead for his life. Instead, his assailants fired the fatal shots.

Then, it is indicated, they decided that Jackson had seen too much, and the gunman who had been holding a pistol to his head fired. By this, the police believe that the assassins were known to both Mitchell and Jackson.

Mitchell was re-elected treasurer of the Checker Cab Company on January 9 after a stormy election. Mitchell and the other officers represent one of the several cliques who have been battling for control of the taxi company ever since its founding.

SLAYER OF FILLING STATION WORKER IS GUILTY OF MURDER

Faces Electric Chair
For Death During Hold-Up

TIFFIN, O., Jan. 30.—Lawrence Dull, 24-year-old Tiffin bandit, will die in the electric chair at Ohio State Penitentiary for the slaying of Roy Tish, gasoline station attendant, during an attempted robbery at Fostoria last November.

The youth was found guilty in the first-degree by a jury late yesterday in common pleas court here. No offer of a recommendation for mercy was given. The jury was out only four hours.

Dull was removed when he heard the verdict that he must die in the electric chair.

Dull and a companion, Kenneth Brown, of New Kingsville, were charged with attempting to rob Tish's station. When Tish resisted their commands to hand over the money from the cash register, Dull shot and fatally wounded him. It is alleged, Brown was wounded in the gun battle and is recovering in a hospital here.

Brown will be arraigned on the same charge as soon as he is released from the hospital. He testified at Dull's trial last Tuesday and laid all blame for the killing on Dull.

SHOP AROUND FOR MATE SAYS FAMOUS DIVORCE AUTHORITY

SHOP FOR YOUR WIFE OR HUSBAND AS YOU WOULD FOR A SUIT OR A DRESS.

By FRANK J. CIPRIANI
Central Press Staff Writer
CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—What's wrong with modern marriage, what's right and wrong with divorce, what's the matter with the present generation of men and women? These human problems are answered by the man who is said to have granted more divorces, listened to more tragedies, and reconciled more embittered wives and husbands than anyone else in the world. He is Judge Joseph Sabath, international authority on divorce, and regarded by some as the world's dean of divorce judges. He has already signed more than 42,000 decrees.

For a decade, streams of disillusioned men and women, carrying tales of woe and shattered dreams, have flocked into Judge Sabath's "Temple of Ruined Romances" to be freed of matrimonial fetters. Some come eagerly, some flippantly, and some sorrowfully. Some are reconciled, but most depart free.

tic, and believes marriage is stronger than divorce. "The trouble is not, perhaps, so much with divorce as with marriage," says Judge Sabath. "Hasty marriages mean more divorces." Here are a few Sabath aphorisms: "Shop for your wife or husband as you would for a suit or a dress." "Make love religiously after marriage to your wife or husband." "Don't wait for a fortune before marrying. Your wife's your fortune." "Marry for love, not alimony." "Know your spouse before, not after, marriage." "Divorce in haste, repent at leisure." In this article Judge Sabath reveals his views on pre-marriage requisites. First of all, young men and women should thoroughly understand one another before marriage, he points out. "In a comparative sense, young people should shop for their mates much as they would for dresses or suits," said Judge Sabath. "A girl buying a dress goes from store to store before making a purchase. A man seldom buys a suit at the first tailor store he enters. Why should not similar care be exercised in seeking a mate? My advice is: 'Shop for your wife or husband as you would for a suit or a dress.'"

XENIA MUSICIANS WARMLY RECEIVED

A real artistic triumph was the recital given by Mr. Roy Carl Siebert, talented young Xenian organist, assisted by Miss Marjorie Street, prominent musician of Xenia, at the Friends Church of Xenia, Wednesday evening.

In the opening movement of the "Concerto by Handel," Mr. Siebert displayed a technical skill which lasted throughout the entire program and met with an appreciative response from his audience. The concerto was played in true classic style and a warmly romantic mood.

"Evening Song" by Brahms was particularly delightful with its melody of lovely tones interwoven with more somber tones of descending darkness and the registration was exceptionally well selected.

The ever-lovely "Ave Maria" by Franz Schubert was Mr. Siebert's next contribution to the program and was immediately followed by the stirring "Coronation March" by Svendsen. Here it was that the organist called into play his usual dexterity of technique combined with a great fire of imagination.

The "Triolet" from Debussy's "Evangeline Suite" was given a truly poetic interpretation with its delicate contrast with its rhythmic tick-tock and dancing melody.

Sturges' "Caprice" was Mr. Siebert's final solo contribution to the evening and portrayed at once both budding musicianship and brilliant spirit.

The remainder of the program was devoted to ensemble music with Miss Street assisting at the piano. The young artists' interpretation of Schubert's "Kamelienvater" won the approval of the audience with its charming musical taste and laudable work.

While the "Andante et Scherzetto" of Chaminade was equally well done.

The versatility of both performers was evident when Mr. Siebert took his place at the piano for the piano, the young artists' interpretation of Schubert's "Kamelienvater" won the approval of the audience with its charming musical taste and laudable work.

YOU can judge a man by his nickname, not so much by the sobriquet itself as by eligibility to be publicly quoted. For all nicknames are not complimentary and many a famous man would be surprised were he to discover the label that his staff or the public have devised for him.

Washington is the home of the sobriquet and the government is its fertile breeding ground. Men who are well-liked are nearly always referred to by their nickname, and the uninitiated often have a hard time keeping track of the various names that characterize the great and near-great. President Hoover is invariably referred to as "The Chief," not because of the office he holds but because it is the name given him when he was Secretary of Commerce.

To Mrs. Hoover he is "Bert," the only other byname he has ever had. When "Charlie" is mentioned in official circles, the initiated know that Vice-President Curtis is under discussion. This nickname was supplied his former nickname, "Big Chief," which is descriptive of his Indian origin.

The Secretary of State is known as "Stimy" at the State Department, and the Assistant Secretary, Joseph P. Cotton, is affectionately known as "Uncle Joe." The very good looking and cordial Assistant Secretary of the Navy is known as Commodore, not because of his naval affiliations, but because that happens to be the sobriquet given to him years ago in his home town, New Orleans.

General Summerall, Chief of Staff of the Army, is known as "Sitting Bull," to immortalize the name of his telephone exchange in France during the World War.

Engineers and embodies four outstanding advances in American radio technique which leads the world. While the new station is rated at 50 kilowatts in the antenna, by means of a new technique described as 100 per cent modulation the station is capable of reaching a peak of 200 kilowatts output during transmission.

On addition, new mercury vapor rectifier tubes for high voltage rectification increase the operating efficiency, and effect a saving in energy of from 25 to 40 kilowatts over the ordinary type of vacuum tube rectifier.

The Rome station is the only one outside of the United States to use 100 kilowatt transmitting Radio tubes. These are the largest vacuum tubes in commercial use.

The fourth feature is a system of constant frequency regulation which keeps transmission steady on the desired wave length without the usual deviation, through, crystals kept in a special temperature-controlled oven. The temperature in the oven never varies more than one tenth of a degree.

The decision to purchase American apparatus was reached after engineers of EIAR had made a careful study of broadcasting transmission throughout the world. Alessandro Banfi, chief engineer of the Italian broadcasting company, visited this country last spring to study American broadcasting methods, and on his departure expressed great admiration for the high standards of which American broadcasting was maintained.

One of the best ways to determine the selectivity of a radio receiving set, states J. A. Dowle of the National Radio Institute, of Washington, D. C., is to tune in to the nearest high power local broadcasting station and then observe the effect of slight detuning upon volume. For example, if a single control receiver, under test, brings in a local station with the greatest volume with the scale set at the broadcasting station's transmitting frequency in kilocycles, say 950, then turn the control knob right and left so that the scale reads 960 and 940. That is, ten kilocycles above and ten kilocycles below 950 kilocycles. If this is sufficient to tune out the local station or reduce its volume substantially, this indicates a highly selective receiver.

A moderately selective receiver tunes out a powerful local broadcasting station in ten kilocycles above and twenty kilocycles below the frequency of the local broadcasting station, while a receiver which requires tuning thirty kilocycles below to lose the signal from a local powerful broadcasting station is lacking in selectivity.

Such a receiver, continues Dowle, may be suitable for use in a locality where there are few broadcasting stations, but, in the proximity of metropolitan districts, where many stations are heard at considerable volume, it is not likely to give satisfaction.

The greater number of broadcasting stations in a district where a receiving set is being used, the more important the quality of selectivity. Keep this in mind when purchasing or selecting a radio receiving set for your friend. Unless the selectivity of a receiver is adequate to receive every local and nearby station, undisturbed by interference from other stations programs cannot possibly be enjoyed.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE MASTER'S PROMISE—Jesus said: When the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me: And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning.—John 15:26, 27.

ANOTHER CLASH

A flareup in the Chaco Boreal just as the London conference was getting down to work recalls that the last serious clash in that disputed territory occurred just as the all-American conference on arbitration and conciliation was gathering in Washington a year ago. The conference took a hand in the matter and finally induced Paraguay and Bolivia to sign a protocol, accepting a commission of inquiry and conciliation composed of two members for each of the disputants and one each for the United States, Cuba, Mexico, Colombia and Uruguay. An American, General Frank McCoy, was elected chairman of the commission. Secretary Stimson announced early in September that the commission had succeeded in restoring direct diplomatic relations between Bolivia and Paraguay, which he interpreted as clearing the way to a settlement of the "fundamental controversy."

The charge made by the Paraguayan legation in Washington that Bolivia is again making warlike gestures in the Chaco is denied in La Paz; but the mere fact of the charge being made shows how unpropitious the atmosphere is in which to seek an amicable division of disputed territory. A solution of the fundamental controversy can hardly be hoped for as long as contending nations fail to abide by the spirit, as well as the letter of instruments to which they put their hands. The incident shows how close to the surface the fires of conflict are burning; and infinite tact and patience will be required to keep them from bursting through. A permanent settlement of the Tacna-Arica controversy was not reached for half a century. The row in the Chaco has many of the features of that now happily adjusted dispute—and it may be as long in reaching a permanent settlement.

IF WAR SHOULD COME AGAIN

The World war made it imperative that the United States use the draft to furnish needed man power. The days of old, when a nation's battles could be fought with volunteers, is past. Modern warfare will demand, more and more, vast numbers of soldiers, vast resources, both natural and manufactured, and vast wealth. It is a conclusive fact, that if the United States ever does enter another major war, the first step, either before war is declared, or afterward, will be to draft the youth of our country.

The veterans of the World war, as represented by three-quarters of a million in the American Legion, believe that if youth is drafted to fight the nation's battles in the future, then capital, and material, also, should be made to serve the nation—at least controlled, and mobilized in a way that all profit will be eliminated.

The Legion wants such a fundamental principle, the principle of "equal service for all in time of war, and special privilege or profit to none," written into the basic law of our land. In order to do this, the Reed-Walworth resolution, written by the Legion, has been introduced in congress with the request that it be adopted at this session.

That resolution provides for a commission to be appointed to study and investigate the principle of universal draft in case of war. The commission would be composed of representatives and senators, and representatives of capital, of labor, of industry and of the other elements of our national life and business. The duty of the commission would be to agree upon such a principle, and frame a bill which would be submitted for the consideration of congress.

Certainly, this request of the former members of our armed forces in the greatest war in history is reasonable and fair. If we ever have another war, we certainly will have the draft, but it is liable to be a draft of men to fight, only when we have a workable law, which would make capital fight, too, along with the youth of our country, we will have as sure a guarantee for peace, as such a thing can be assured.

The WAY of the WORLD

COURAGE

One may or may not agree with Nicholas Murray Butler when he condemns the Volstead law and calls upon the American people to do something about the tragic lawlessness that has followed the incompetent attempt to enforce the eighteenth amendment. This writer, while not agreeing with Dr. Butler on all points, admires his courage for speaking out in meeting. The president of Columbia university lives on terms of familiarity and friendship with some of the greatest preachers and religious figures in America. His voice is raised often in the city of New York on the side of good government but he does not believe in the prohibition experiment, as President Hoover calls it. What the country needs most, perhaps, is greater frankness and sincerity on the part of men in high position.

HONOR NOW

Newspapers or organizations which offer trophies to be awarded to citizens for outstanding service are to be commended. There is too much deserved honor which is never brought into the light until the chief beneficiary is dead. A man who deserves the reward of honor—the rich reward that comes only from the openly expressed appreciation of his fellow men whom he has worked for—deserves it here and now.

SILENT WAR DRUMS

One reads that President Von Hindenburg offers a cup for a yacht race to be participated in by American and German yachtsmen. How strangely and pleasantly such news falls on the ear in comparison with the news that came from the "Von Hindenburg line" only a few years ago. The Creator was especially good when He gave men short memories.

FORGETTING

Let's never complain about our short memories. Be glad for them. It is so much more important to forget most of the time, than to remember. There are a few things worth remembering. There are thousands of things that deserve eternal forgetting. If you can learn to forget your grievances, for example, you have paved the road to peace of mind.

IMPAIRMENT

Fear impairs. Fear makes you incompetent. Fear puts you in the way of making mistakes. Fear is like drunkenness. It befuddles the mind and tremendously increases the likelihood of error. Just as a practical measure, to say nothing of the comfort it will give your soul, you ought to eliminate fear.

Replying to J. G., the members of the body of investigators appointed by President Hoover as a National Commission on Law Observation and Enforcement, with a word or two to identify each of them are: Ex-Attorney General George W. Wickersham, New York, chairman; Henry W. Anderson, lawyer, Richmond (Va.); ex-Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, Cleveland; President Ada L. Canadian Prohibition

Was Canada dry on a national basis, like the United States, prior to its reversion to legalized liquor sales throughout most of its territory? No; Canada's dry laws were provincial; that is to say, they were what would be called state laws, on the American side of the border.

Parrot Fever

How is psittacosis pronounced? Sit-ak-o-sis, with the accent on the third syllable.

Grade Crossing Perils

How does the grade crossing danger compare with ordinary perils of the highways? Chairman Morris Goodkind of the grade crossing committee of the American Road Builders' association estimates that grade crossing dangers are three and one-half times as great as those of the highways elsewhere.

Census Figures

What are the percentages of men and women in the United States? There were 104 men to each 100 women in the United States when the 1920 census (the last one) was taken.

Old Coins

Has a $1 gold piece dated 1853 any special value? As money or at the treasury, it is worth only its face; as a curiosity, to a coin collector, $2.50 to $3.00.

Stribling Won Twice

How many times have Young Stribling and Tommy Loughran fought, and who won? Three. Stribling beat Loughran in 1924 and again in 1925. Loughran won in 1927.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK.—Max Steuer, one of the leaders of Manhattan's Blackstone Brigade, is authority for the statement that there are only ten efficient trial lawyers in New York.

Just to keep the record straight: Max is the Little Boy who, some months ago, traveled all the way to California to try to keep Brother Pantages out of the "can."

And as we go to press, Pantages is still in.

LITTLE DID HE THINK

Speaking of Pantages: When poor old "Fatty" Arbuckle got jammed, the performers out of the Coast took up a collection to defray legal expenses. They went to Pantages.

"Nothing doing," said Pan. "He got himself into the trouble with that girl, now let him get himself out!"

As dear old Laura Jean Libby used to say: "Little did he think."

FORTUNES FOR FORTUNES

I caught sight of her as she emerged from the abode of a fortune teller and lingered, shame-faced, on the top step, a bit faded and patchy in the hard, winter sunlight.

Then, of a sudden, up went her head, back went her shoulders, and her tread was firm as she regained the pavement. The futilities of life had been submerged. Thereafter, heart's ease was to be her portion—on the bare word of a lying seer.

Young Bob LaFollette Becoming Formidable Factor in Senate

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Young Bob LaFollette has been developing formidably in the senate in the last few months.

For quite a while there was considerable wondering how, in the long run, he was likely to compare with his father, whom friends and foes alike recognized as one of the giants of the upper house of congress.

Observers are arriving now at the conclusion that he gives every promise of a career for his sire, if he can watch it, to be proud of.

A GREAT man's son is at an obvious advantage in some respects; in others about equally handicapped.

On the one hand, it is highly improbable that young Bob would be a senator at 35 except by what amounts to inheritance. Able as he might be (and as it is beginning to appear that he really is) the chances are that he would have had to wait a dozen or 15 years to attain his present position by his own effort. A 12 or 15-year "jump" on one's generation is worth having.

That is to say, it is worth having, provided the individual to whom such a lead is given is prepared already to make the most of it. Otherwise it may be just the thing to spoil his future, by furnishing him with the opportunity to fail before he is prepared to do himself the full justice of maturity.

THERE is no question that his best wishes were pretty uneasy when young Bob first took his senate seat in 1925, less than a year above minimum age required to enable him to qualify for it.

It is a testimonial to the soundness of his judgment that he was in no hurry to prove himself.

A mediocre performer by an equally youthful senator of obscure political parentage perhaps would have passed muster as a tolerably creditable showing for a youngster; young Bob evidently was perfectly conscious that anything he said or did immediately would be contrasted with what the whole senate would be sure to surmise that the elder LaFollette would have said or done in the same circumstances—and it would be a mighty hard comparison.

At all events, young Bob has kept decidedly quiet until rather recently. Not that he is the boisterous type of senator yet. Still, gradually he has been coming out of his oratorical shell lately—and to excellent effect.

In the meantime, as might have been expected, whispers were starting to go around that he did not measure up to his father.

It was just as the senate was making up its mind to this effect with some definiteness that the young Wisconsin solon began to reveal what was in him—a more or less as a surprise, if he got the full benefit. An exceptionally well thought out program!

IN a sense it doubtless is helpful to young Bob that he is not greatly like the elder LaFollette, since the difference makes him more his own man and not so much his father's son.

His younger brother, Phillip, not so well known in Washington, is said strongly to resemble LaFollette, both in appearance and temperament, but young Bob was spoken of, even during the senior Senator LaFollette's lifetime, as being far more like his mother.

His views, to be sure, were his father's; but, for that matter, are his mother's also.

IN the matter of technical training the young Wisconsin lawmaker unquestionably is the best equipped member of the senate to express himself effectively in public.

From the outset it has been evident that, assuming he had ideas, he understood how to present them tellingly.

Now that any uncertainty concerning the first-class quality of his abilities is being rapidly dissipated, the senate's "left wing" is coming quickly to bank on him as its political philosophy's hope of the next three or four decades in Washington—and the "right" to regard him with correspondingly dark forebodings.

At his age, and with his start, if he makes good and lives a normal lifetime, he has a record span as a public man ahead of him.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

LUNCHEON
Lima Beans, Buttered
Tomatoes
Cranberry Mold
Chocolate Wafers
Tea

DINNER
Veal Loaf
Creamed Beets
Celery par Excellence with Cheese Balls
Rolls
Pumpkin Custard with Whipped Cream
Graham Crackers

This hearty menu for a day was planned for three persons. I like the idea of serving graham or oatmeal crackers with a pudding instead of cake or richer cookies.

Today's Recipes
Cranberry Mold—Four cups cranberries, two cups water, two cups granulated sugar. Boil cranberries with water until tender. Strain. Add sugar and boil eight to ten minutes. Pour in wet mold. Cool.

Chunk Pickles—Seven pounds large pickles. Soak in strong salt water for three days. Chunk and let stand three hours in boiling alum water. Preserve in three pints of strong vinegar, three pounds of sugar, one-half ounce of celery seed, one-half ounce of allspice and one-half ounce of cinnamon bark.

Celery Par Excellence—One bunch celery, diced, one-fourth head cabbage, one green pepper, one-half red pepper, one medium-sized carrot, one apple, one-half cup nut meats. Chop all ingredients finely. Chill. Serve on lettuce leaf with mayonnaise and cheese balls.

Veal Loaf—One and one-half pounds veal (chopped), one-fourth pound salt pork (chopped), cracker crumbs, two tablespoons cream, one-half tablespoon lemon juice, one teaspoon salt, pepper, onion juice. Mix ingredients, pack in bread pan, bake slowly three hours, basting frequently.

Suggestions
Grape Dip
Grape jelly can be served on ice cream instead of the more usual sauces. Any jelly or preserves not too firm could be used instead, but grape is especially good.

To Dry Galoshes
Heat two ears of field corn hot in the oven and place in galoshes over night. The corn will absorb all moisture and leave galoshes dry by morning.

Answers to Mothers

"Dear Doctor: My baby girl, two and a half years old, still takes the bottle and eats very little food, although I do everything I can to get her to eat. She appears nervous and excitable and doesn't sleep as much and as soundly as a child of her age should."

"For two years she has had a sore tongue and suffers from constipation very often. She is constipated and we have to give her laxatives continually."

"MRS. M."

A baby should be weaned entirely from the bottle by the end of the first year; at the latest, and even during the last two months of the first year, baby should be having its milk during the day from a cup.

There is probably no doubt your little girl is not getting enough solid food, so she is not getting all of the elements she needs for growth and repair. You must take the bottle away from her absolutely, I think, and you'll have to do it abruptly. There is no doubt that she will be fussy and irritable for three or four days (warn your neighbors!) but you will have to stand it, for it is for her welfare. And you may have to cut her milk down to two or three glasses a day instead of a quart, until she will eat more solid foods.

Her sore tongue and throat may be an indication of a degree of scurvy, on account of lack of fruits and vegetables, and it is almost certain that her constipation is due to the fact that she is not getting enough solid foods. Set her back down before her, and don't fuss over her or call her attention to her not eating; if she doesn't eat, take her away and let her have nothing until the next meal, except some water. Above all things, don't give her her bottle. I think you'll find she will eat after the second meal she loses.

All children should have the following foundation diet:

DAILY FOUNDATION DIET FOR EACH CHILD

Part 1—Protective Foods

1 1-2 pints of milk, at least.
1 full cupful of vegetables (especially the green-leaf vegetables), part of them raw.
1 full cupful of fruit, part fresh if possible.
1 to 2 ounces of high protein food; flesh foods, eggs, cheese.

Part 2—Energy Foods

Cereals, including whole-grain breads, rice, macaroni, potatoes and simple desserts.

Fats in the form of butter, cream, egg yolks and nuts.

We have a list of books on child feeding and general care of children, which you may have by following column rules.

Mrs. C.: It is alright to let the children have some fruit after they come home from school, but allowing them to "piece" between meals as often as they like is a bad habit.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

LOVE is blind, they say, and it surely seems true. A girl may see a man break all the laws in the decalogue, and if he has that magic something—or seems to her to have it—that attracts her, she is as blind as a bat.

Now take the following letter from a 16-year-old. Wouldn't you think that even a youngster of 16 would be able to see that a man who "had to marry" a girl, as she puts it, who has been married four years and has a little girl five years old, would be an undesirable, even a repulsive, person to a sweet young girl, instead of the girl loving him and wanting to marry him when, or if, he divorces his wife?

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a girl of 16 and madly in love with a married man. He is also young, but not as young as I. He had to get married for one reason. There are interfering parents—his own who make life miserable for young couples, who do not appreciate their parents and who impose on them scandalously. But aren't the parents often to blame in this case? The young people lack sense of responsibility. No parent should consent to support the children after they have brought them up and educated them, out of their nest, just as the birds do their young when they are able to fly."

"Why didn't your friend propose simultaneously when, after offering her home to the old couple—who we so deserving—the sons and daughters and in-laws began assembling? He certainly should. The trouble with our older ones is we see scared of the younger generation. We don't dare say no. Let's bravely, brother, and tell 'em."

Confirming a previous announcement made in this column, it was disclosed Wednesday that in the girls' division of the approaching county Class B basketball tourney, the two-division floor will be substituted for the three-division court, which has been used for feminine teams since the tournament was founded.

As an illustration that the three-zone court is more fatiguing for the girls, Bellbrook High School officials, strongest supporters of the two-division floor, recall that Evelyn Peterson, a forward, and Ida Barnett, center, on the school's championship feminine sextet last season, were exhausted physically after the 1929 county tourney.

Miss Peterson at forward was responsible for most of the points scored by her team throughout the event and did a great percentage of the shooting. There is a limit to human endurance and this girl probably got more exercise out of the tourney than any other player, boy or girl. After the tourney, her health was so broken that for a time her condition was critical. She is playing again this season.

Under the two-division system there are three forwards instead of two and the scoring responsibilities are shifted to three players. Thus, it is claimed, the games will not prove so fatiguing for the forwards especially.

Information contained in the latest bulletin released by the Ohio High School Athletic Association, particularly an interpretation of the rules which determine the classification of a high school in Class A or Class B, may be appreciated by followers of basketball in county circles.

According to the bulletin, four-year schools with 150 boys or more on November 1 shall be regarded as Class A. A senior high school with 115 boys on the same date shall be likewise Class A. No A school may compete in a B series. Any B school whose season's record indicates that it is of A strength may enter an A tournament, provided permission is obtained from Commissioner H. R. Townsend.

Private, parochial and exempted schools may take part in the county tournaments if invited by the county management. However, if an exempted village, private or parochial high school is a member of the county athletic association, the schools under county supervision do not have the right to exclude such from the county tournament.

The second annual foul shooting contest to be held in conjunction with the county, sectional, district and state basketball tournaments again this year, is also discussed at length in the recent bulletin of the state association.

Last year, it is pointed out, there was considerable interest manifested in most parts of the state in the first free throw contest. However, some of the schools were apparently not much interested, for in a few tournaments no contestants were entered. Complaints were made also that in some of the county tournaments the managers made no provisions for the contest, inasmuch as it behooves all coaches to emphasize accurate foul-shooting as many games are lost at the foul-line, the hope is expressed by the association that each of the 1,100 teams in the state will enter the contest this year.

Here are the regulations which govern the foul shooting contest held in connection with county tournaments:

Each competing school will enter its best foul shooters. They may or may not be members of the team, but they must be eligible under the rules of the state association. These two representatives are to be selected by competition. It is suggested that each school hold a free throw contest open to all the boys of the school and that the winner and runner-up be the school's representatives in the county tournament.

The coach shall hand the manager of the tournament the names of his two contestants properly certified by the administrative head of the school. The manager shall then arrange a time schedule. Each participant is to be given five practice throws. He will then be allowed thirty throws.

The manager shall provide some-one competent to tabulate the results. Should a tie occur, fifteen more throws will be permitted. Should the contestant not be a member of the school's team, any expenses incurred shall be borne by the school. The county tournament may or may not present the winner and runner-up with individual awards.

A free throw contest may also be arranged for the girls but their competition shall end with the county tournament.

Two Division Court Will Prevail For Girls

OHIO ATHLETIC COMMISSIONER DECIDES FOR COUNTY TOURNEY

Class B School Favors Two-Division Floor For Girls' Games In Vote; Three Schools Cast Dissenting Votes

By PHIL FRAME

Although it is contrary to his personal opinion on the subject, Commissioner H. R. Townsend, czar of the Ohio High School Athletic Association and the last court of appeal, has officially ruled that the two-division floor and not the three-division court will be in vogue for the girls' division of the annual Greene County Class B High School basketball tournament at Xenia Central High gymnasium February 28 and March 1.

This official decision has been received by Prof. H. C. Aultman, county school superintendent.

The ruling is in accordance with a vote recently taken by the nine schools with girls' teams eligible to participate in the tourney, the schools favoring the two-zone floor by a vote of six to three. Ross Twp., Caesar Creek and Beavercreek cast dissenting votes but Beaver land changed over to the majority side.

Commissioner Townsend also recommended that the length of the Xenia floor be reduced to fifty-nine feet, eleven inches, which will be one inch under the maximum for a two-division court.

The principal argument advanced by schools favoring the three-zone floor was that under this system the sport was less strenuous for the girls but this claim was denied by supporters of the two-division floor.

Bellbrook, which and the champion feminine team of the county last season, was one of the strongest advocates of the two-division system and the school's superintendent, Ray S. Blackburn, obtained from Miss Evelyn Logan, Rutherford, N. J., the official interpreter of the Women's Official Basketball Rules, an opinion that the Xenia floor can be shortened at both ends without moving the backboards and still meet the regulations governing girls' basketball games.

Bellbrook school officials argued that the three-division court proved so fatiguing to two members of its feminine team last season that these girls were completely exhausted after the 1929 county tourney and their health was impaired for some time.

Following in the letter received from Commissioner Townsend in which the entire controversy is explained:

"As I pointed out to you in my letter of the 9th, the state association is not at all concerned in the number of divisions to be used by your girls in your county tournament, save that it is in accordance with the women's official basketball rules."

"I am of the opinion that the Xenia floor can be shortened without moving the backboards and that the floor thus shortened will be in accordance with the above mentioned rules."

"Since Miss Logan has final jurisdiction as to the interpretation and application of the women's official rules, her ruling is final and decisive. She has stated that the floor could even be cut down to fifty-seven feet, five inches and still meet the requirements of the regulations."

"In order to make the floor less than sixty feet in length, the backboards would have to be moved. I most assuredly would not favor thus cutting down the floor."

"As some of you know, I inspected this floor January 21. The floor was carefully measured and the various ways suggested for reducing the length of the playing floor were checked. I am of the opinion that the fifty-seven-foot, five-inch floor would not be very satisfactory, as the two-inch line in front of the backboards might cause the girls a good deal of difficulty if they were not used to an arrangement of this kind. After giving the matter a good deal of thought and attention I believe that the fifty-nine-foot, eleven-inch floor would be most satisfactory."

"It would seem since Miss Logan has ruled that the two-division game can be played on the Xenia floor; since a majority of the schools favor the Xenia floor, that this type of floor would have to be used. In accordance with all of this I hereby make the following decision:

"1.—That the girls' tournament be held on the Xenia Central floor.

"2.—That the floor be reduced to fifty-nine feet, eleven inches in length.

"3.—That a committee be appointed with A. F. Roush as chairman to mark off the floor thus.

"4.—I would recommend that all schools enter their girls' teams and if there has been any controversy, it will be forgotten by all concerned."

In the preliminary games, the East High sophomore class team defeated a Cedarville independent quintet, 13 to 10 but the East freshmen lost to the Dayton Colored Y. M. C. A. staff, thus retreating for the shut out defeat inflicted by the same team on East basketballers last season.

East High had a margin of 14 to 11 at the half. The uncanny basket shooting of Grady, star center, was largely responsible for the victory. Grady scored twenty-one points, collecting eight baskets and five free throws. Smith at guard played a fine defensive game. Spaulding, center, was high scorer for Dayton with eight points.

In the last minute of play Grady was banished from the contest on personal fouls but by that time the game was secured up as far as East was concerned.

CENTRAL HIGH WILL TACKLE STRONG Foe ON THURSDAY NIGHT

Xenia Central's basketball quintet will strive to add Middletown High School to its rapidly growing list of court victims Thursday night at the local gymnasium.

The Bucs will attempt to register their seventh victory of the current season and the Middies will make an equally hard effort to escape their sixth defeat.

Despite Xenia's more imposing record for the season Middletown must be accorded an equal chance to win and local fans are anticipating an exciting struggle.

A preliminary game between Patterson's Central Junior High team and the Boy Scout troop at the O. S. and S. O. Home will start at 7:15 o'clock.

Friday night will be celebrated as "Central Junior High Night" and a double-header basketball treat is in store at the local gym.

In a preliminary game at 7:15 o'clock, the Xenia Central reserves, better known as the "Little Bucs," will stack up against the Dayton Oakwood second team, and in the main contest at 8 o'clock Central Junior High, with a record of five successive victories unless the streak is broken Thursday night, will meet the Oakwood Juniors.

Central Juniors defeated Oakwood Juniors in football by a score of 19 to 0 last fall and hope to duplicate this victory on the hardwood.

Cook, former United States champion pole vaulter in the Olympic games, is director of athletics at Oakwood and is a personal friend of H. Glenn Patterson, who coaches the Central Juniors. They have often handled track meets together.

Central Juniors will lineup for the tilt with "Red" Hook and "Pinch" Adair at guards, Eddie Luttrell and Francis Dalton at forwards and either Jimmy Batson or Willie Glenn at center. Other members of the squad expected to break into the game are Bob Bath, Frank Whittington, Hall McElree, Mike Stiles and Dawson Latimer.

John Gibney will referee the preliminary tussle and Howell Huston will officiate the junior high contest.

Admission of 10 cents for students and 25 cents for adults will be charged for the double attraction. Season tickets for Xenia Central's home games will not be recognized, however.

STARS OF YESTERDAY

Mickey Cochran may be the greatest marksman in the big time today but old-timers have seen plenty of catchers as good if not better.

One of the greatest of all old-time catchers was Charley Snyder, and not far behind him were Buck Ewing, Charley Bennett, Doc Bushong and Silver Flint.

Snyder caught for Washington, Louisville, Boston and Cincinnati, going through many hot campaigns with no substitute to relieve him and no padded mitt, chest protector or shin guards to protect his body from the rifle shots of the great hurlers of those days.

Snyder, when his days behind the bat waned, became manager of the old Washington Nationals and later turned umpire. He died in 1925, just 70 years old.

Buck Ewing was the brilliant backstop of the Giants and Cincinnati until he, like Snyder, turned manager and became boss of the Red Legs in 1895. Though Buck did not do so well as manager, he must be remembered as one of the hardest hitting catchers of all time.

Charley Bennett was a great catcher with the Detroit from 1882 to 1888, and with the Boston from 1889 to 1893. It was his great backstopping that materially aided the Boston Eaters in their successful drives to three flags.

Doc Bushong was one of the mighty men with St. Louis and Brooklyn as the last century slipped into its final decade.

Silver Flint was the star backstop of Pop Johnson's great 1880-1881-1882 championship Chicago outfit. He handled the slants of Larry Corcoran and Fred Glath, the aces of their day. Flint also caught in the first world series, Chicago versus Cincinnati—the series that ended in a tie.

To Coach "Ole Miss"

Stanford's "most valuable player," Charles (Chuck) Smalling, star fullback, has accepted a position as assistant football coach at the University of Mississippi. He will probably go to Oxford, Miss., in the spring.

JAMESTOWN IDLE

A MILD smallpox scare at Jamestown appears to be playing havoc with the school's basketball schedule. Rather than expose members of its boys' and girls' teams to the contagious disease, Cedarville High cancelled a scheduled double-header on the Jamestown floor last week. Two scheduled games this week have also been postponed.

Jamestown was to play at Jeffersonville Wednesday night and had planned to meet Bellbrook at Jamestown Friday night. Jamestown faces the prospect of playing nine games in the next three weeks, an average of three each week, and its next foe will be North Hampton, a Clark County team, at Jamestown next Tuesday night.

Sport Ritticisms

By BILL RITT

Yale, Princeton and Columbia have ruled their baseball coaches off the bench during games. Only undergraduates will be permitted to pick up splinters.

It's a break for the mentors. They may loiter in a swell grandstand seat while infielders pull errors unassisted.

When the game begins a coach can don a set of purple whiskers and get a seat behind third base just beside the shortstop's sweetie.

During the early innings he can spend his time reading last Sunday's funny sheet. It will be more entertaining.

In the fifth inning the coach can work a cross-word puzzle to take his mind off the fact that the second baseman threw the ball over the first baseman's head instead of into the catcher's mitt—allowing three runs to score.

In the seventh stanza the coach fumbles in his beard and draws out a pair of dark blue glasses which he dons. He has seen too much already.

THE WIDOW'S MITE

A WIDOW—she had only one!
A puny and decrepit son;
But, day and night,
Though fretful oft, and weak and small,

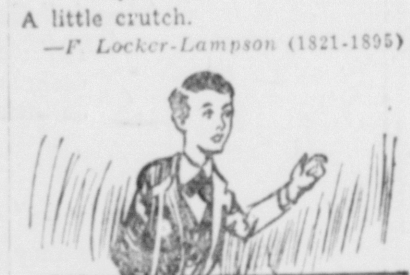

A loving child, he was her all—
The Widow's Mite.

The Widow's Mite! ay, so sustained,
She battled onward, nor complained,
Though friends were fewer,
And while she toiled for daily fare,

A little crutch upon the stair
Was music to her.

I saw her then—and now I see
The widow's Mite, and now I see
Has sorrowed much:
She has, he gave it tenderly,
Much faith; and, carefully laid by,

A little crutch.

Plain Facts About Investments

By W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Bulls in the stock market are looking hopefully to the American investor. They believe that investment buying of the best grade of industrial and railroad common stocks will eventually turn the scales in the direction of higher prices and pull the stock market out of the slough of despond into which it was thrown by last year's devastating smash.

Theoretically, it is the investor who provides the last resting place for investment stocks of all kinds and investment money should and does, provide a large share of the permanent capital funds of the big industrial, railroad and utility corporations. It is only the excess or floating supply which is tossed about in the speculative markets, but prices established on these floating shares set the valuation for the whole of the outstanding shares.

That investors have been buying stocks more lavishly than at any previous period is evidenced by the official statements of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Pennsylvania Railroad, United States Steel Corporation, Consolidated Gas Company and other representative high grade concerns.

A Different Story

When Steel common was tumbling all over itself last November with the bottom nowhere in sight, it was the general impression that the small fellow was being squeezed out of his meager holdings of the stock at the rate that spelled disaster to thousands of holders of five, ten or twenty shares of the stock of this industrial giant. Great concern was felt for the small investor, who was pictured as the drifter on the tempestuous financial seas.

A recent report from the office of the secretary of the steel corporation tells a somewhat different story. Instead of increasing, the "floating supply" of steel stock has decreased by more than 300,000 shares. This shows conclusively that while investment trusts and big bulls were throwing steel overboard in an effort to save their own necks during the last stages of the October-November panic, well-informed and skillfully advised investors were picking up the stock 100 points below the high prices of the September boom.

The continued sluggishness of the bond market in the most important re-investment period of the year may also be taken as a sign of the continued interest of small investors in stocks and their refusal to return to the bond market. Last week the investment bankers floated $300,000,000 of new bonds, the largest weekly peace-time volume in financial history.

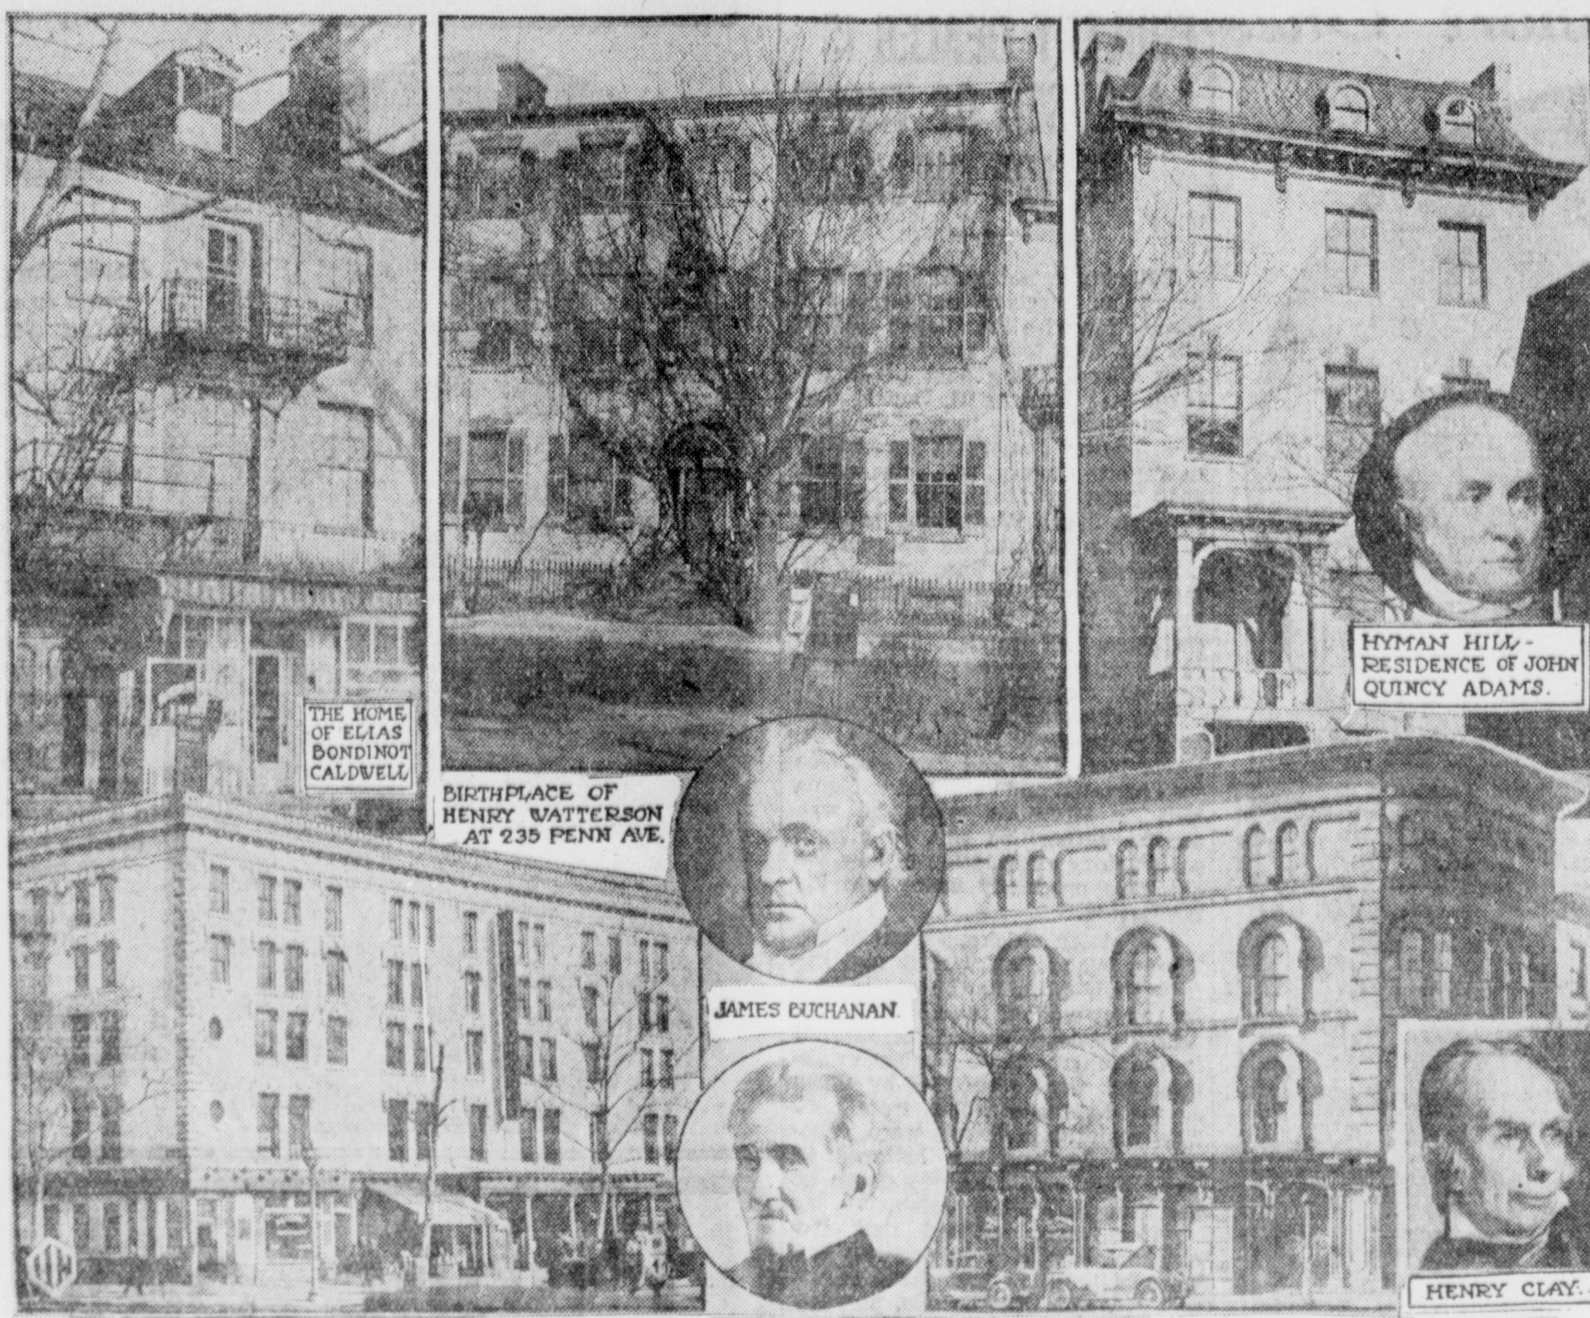

Whether these bonds were actually and genuinely sold, or whether they were simply allotted to banker members of their syndicates, makes a big difference in the status of the bond market. Last year millions of dollars of sold bonds came back on the market at sweeping reductions in prices as soon as the syndicates floating them dissolved, which led the investor to believe that there was considerable hokum about the glowing reports of "over-subscription" of big bond issues offered to the public.

New Bond Offerings

As the result, many bond buyers kept at a respectable distance from all new offerings of bonds until such time as the dissolution of the syndicates was due, and for their shrewdness were rewarded by picking up the securities five or six points below the issue prices. The bond syndicates had practically ruined their own game by attempting to fool the public into believing that the bonds lying on dealers' shelves had actually been sold. There is still a lack of confidence which may react to the advantage of the stock market this year.

Instead of rushing into the bond market, hundreds of small investors are holding their funds intact for bargains in stocks. They have already started to nibble at some of their old favorites, which look extremely attractive to them at the current price levels. When assurances are forthcoming of a sustained recovery in business and a rally in the security markets, these investors will be on hand with funds a plenty. They will be an important factor in the recovery of the stock market from the devastating fall of last year.

Noted in History, Give Way to Modern Buildings

'NATIONAL HOTEL ON PENN. AVE. WHERE BUCHANAN CAME TO HIS INAUGURATION IN 1857.

ECHOES of bygone days will answer the blow of the wreck-er's hammer as it falls on the walls of an old building in Washington, D. C. And a ghostly convention of bygone figures will assemble for a last farewell of the place that was for many of them their favorite earthly habitat.

When the National Hotel is torn down to make room for the Capital's proposed Civic Center, it will mean the demolition of a building that, aside from the Capitol and the White House, has seen the making of more momentous history than any other edifice. Since its opening in 1827, since when it has been in continuous operation, it has attracted the greatest statesmen, politicians, writers, artists and all the great who appreciated magnificent cuisine and a subtly different atmosphere. Its visitors' book is a rollcall of the famous.

To the National came Andrew Jackson when he arrived in Washington for his inauguration, and no doubt he enjoyed the wonderful food that was served at various banquets in his honor. The night of his inauguration he dined there with John C. Calhoun as his guest. President Polk was also a pre-inauguration guest, as was President Buchanan, who was almost killed by a seepage of sewer gas into the hotel. It was at the National that Henry Clay breathed his last. Horace Greeley, Louis Kossuth and other famous men were visitors to his suite, No. 32, which was a gathering place for the great.

The banquet rooms of the National have rung with the inspired eloquence of such speakers as Henry Clay, Daniel Webster, John C. Calhoun, John J. Crittenden, and Alexander S. Stevens who was Vice President of the Southern Confederacy. Charles Dickens was a visitor to the hotel and has given a vivid account of the life there in the first edition of "American Notes." It is said that the assassination of Lincoln was planned in room No. 228, which was occupied for a long time prior to the murder by John Wilkes Booth.

The birthplace of Henry Watter-son, the great editor and politician, at No. 35 Pennsylvania Avenue, is also to be razed, as is the building erected by the American Colonization Society, wherein was held the meeting that led to the foundation of the Republic of Liberia in West Africa. Another old building to go is Hyman Hill, where, it is said, John Quincy Adams resided. The house was built in 1800, and contains elaborate carvings.

WORST BAD MAN CAUGHT, GETS 140 YEARS IN PRISON

By MADELIN LEOP
Central Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 30.—Chicago may take first place in

William "Blackie" Zupkosky crime, but its "bad men" will have to go a long way to equal the record of Philadelphia's "boy bandit," William "Blackie" Zupkosky. Just 19, he was, until taken prisoner and convicted, the most feared man in the city. He had to his credit 113 holdups plus a thrilling escape from the Philadelphia General Hospital, where he was thought to be dying of a bullet wound through the heart.

Young, dark complexioned, defiant, "Blackie" came to court handcuffed to two detectives but denying participation in any of the innumerable crimes of which he was accused. He stood before the court seemingly not one white overcast or frightened by the possibility of being sentenced to a period of 410 to 820 years in prison. When he was convicted by four juries in record-breaking speed and sentenced to seventy to 140 years, his only answer was that they would have a hard time keeping him in the "pen."

Why He Carries Bible

"Blackie's" only superstition seemed to be that of carrying a Bible. When he was asked why he did that, he answered that he had read somewhere that a bandit was once saved from death by carrying the holy book. Instead of killing the bandit, the bullet went through the book.

Several months ago "Blackie" was caught by Detective Harry Neil. The "boy bandit" was shot and apparently seriously wounded. He was placed in the hospital under arrest. To everyone's amazement, sick as he was, he escaped. According to his own story, he leaped thirty feet out of a window, scaled an eighteen-foot wall, and hid in an empty lot for long hours. When he believed it was safe to move, he stole some workman's clothes which he found lying about, changed into them and felt himself at once more a free man.

At "Blackie's" trial, when a detective was telling how he had grappled with Zupkosky before wounding him, "Blackie" interrupted to shout, "You're a liar. You're trying to show off. You shot me in the back."

That is "Blackie's" character. He is defiant to the end.

Gibson Girl Declares For Sensible Skirt Lengths - Meaning Short Ones

By KATHERINE BANTA
Central Press Correspondent
BAY CITY, Mich., Jan. 30.—
"Femininity does not depend upon the dress, but upon the wearer, and there's nothing more inherently feminine in long skirts than in short ones!" So says the Gibson Girl herself, who held sway over the imaginations of both men and women in the early nineties, and who is now Mrs. H. W. Garland, of this city.

Mrs. Garland, an active club woman, was a Gibson girl in 1894 and 1895, the original of Charles Dana Gibson's famous studies of The Girl with the Violin, notably the picture entitled "Memories," which hangs on the walls of many old homes today that have refused to relegate it to the attic.

Following the Fashion
"Women who are wearing the new long skirts are doing so simply because they are intent upon following the fashion, without regard to heightened femininity or comfort or convenience," declares Mrs. Garland. "For we weren't a bit more feminine in those days than real women are today, and surely not so comfortable, and we certainly found no convenience in setting in and out of the vehicles of that mauve decade."

"But how did you happen to be the Girl with the Violin?" I asked. "How would a girl of those days, noted as she was for great modesty, become a model of the famous Gibson?"

"Oh, it was the merest accident," she replied, with a touch of the proverbial nineties' modesty. "You see, I was in New York studying the violin under Clifford Schmidt, who was then concertmaster for Anton Seidel's famous orchestra which played in summer at the fashionable Brighton Beach resort, and in winter at the Metropolitan Opera House."

"One afternoon Mr. Gibson was a guest at a tea in a home where I was being entertained, and for some reason noticed me with my violin. He asked that I be presented to him, and during the conversation that followed, asked me to come to his studio to pose for some pictures. Of course, I did, and the first drawing that was the outcome of the sittings was 'Memories,' known originally as 'The Girl with the Violin.'"

Typical Costume
"The costume I'm wearing in the picture was typical of that day, one that you could see anywhere in New York or other American cities. And probably the sweeping skirts were as appropriate in Mr. Gibson's spacious studio with its deep red hangings, as anywhere else."

But the woman to whom I was talking was wearing so mid-Victorian costume. In her lovely living room, rich in books and music, given a touch of the early nineties by its pen-and-ink drawings and water-colors of the Gibsons of 1894—somehow reminiscent of those days with its openhearted fire and its old grand piano—she herself was a very modern bit of feminine wisdom. She was dressed in a smart street frock, not a fraction longer than the conventional four-inches below-the-knee, and her whole figure was as athletically 1930 as her frock.

"Do you really think that comfort enters into this season's long-skirt problems, Mrs. Garland?"

"Oh, of course, the four-petticoats haven't returned, nor are they likely to. But if we permit ourselves to urge just a bit more of this and a bit more of that upon us, season by season, as they have insidiously done in the past, comfort is very likely to have to come into it. The waistline has gone up. But surely we won't permit it to become smaller around, in this day of physical freedom and activity?"

"But I hate even to think that American women will wear trailing skirts, or near-trailing ones, for street and sport and general wear. Evening dresses—perhaps. We have always permitted ourselves more imagination and individuality at dinner and after it seems."

Individuality in Skirts
"Oh, then you do think that the long skirts give more individuality?" I asked, with a shade of surprise.

"Well, a little elasticity in our treatment of the hemline will give most women a better chance to be individual. You know, we have all been slavishly addicted to the short skirts, whether we had legs that were good to look at or not, and whether we were tall or short."

"Women should look well at themselves before they decide upon their costumes. And if they will refuse to wear either too short or too long dresses, fashion edict or no, it strikes me."

It also strikes us forcibly that if you would let us vulcanize those worn tires the savings and service would really amaze you. Our established policy of superior service adds to the advisability of letting men who know how to do your vulcanizing in preference to entrusting the work to silphoid methods.

not, if the style does not enhance their personality or physical attractions, they'll be exercising their modern freedom of thought.

"But I think that American women in general will be unwilling to wear skirts that are long enough to be out of keeping with their busy lives. And even the men in the last season or two, have looked with irritated disapproval on the very long evening gowns. They're not appropriate, these bouffant-to-the-floor models, or the slim trailing ones, either."

"The wearers say they are more feminine, and continue to take their cocktails and converse in the accepted uninhibited manner, and then hurry away to dash somewhere else in their own automobiles, dragging their long skirts inconveniently behind them. They're in their own way, though some women won't admit it."

The Sensible Length
"What do you think is the sensible length for the modern woman, then, Mrs. Garland, a length which will be both becoming and in keeping with present-day activities?"

"Oh, the to-the-curve length, don't you think? That gives plenty of freedom of movement, and yet covers the knees, which are seldom beautiful except in young girls."

"You don't think, then, that young girls should cover their knees?"

"Oh, mercy not!" exclaimed Mrs. Garland. "Why should they? They don't even know they have knees. No one is conscious of them any more, so far as that is concerned, I merely mean that many older women would be adding to the beauty of the world by letting their skirts down slightly lower than the flappers."

"But don't you miss the old chivalry that you knew in the days of the early Gibson Girl?"

"Miss it? Why, men are not more chivalrous to women because of long skirts or high collars. Chivalry," said the beauty, the exquisite Maude Snyder, "is not a manner that is predicated on what a woman wears. Chivalry depends upon the woman herself, and is an attitude that she herself inspires in a man. There is plenty of chivalry today, though of course not of the old kind that was principally a surface gesture. The modern woman hasn't demanded the old type, because she hasn't wanted it. She has grown up, rather, into the need for comradeship, and the sort of give and take recognition of her mentality and capability that she now knows she has. The giving of this comradeship and fair play is as

POULTRY DEALER IS ACCUSED OF THEFT OF 125 CHICKENS

Entering a not guilty plea to a charge of burglary and larceny in connection with the alleged theft of 125 chickens from the farm of Osman Glass, living east of Jamestown, last January 23, Donald Coe, 45, member of the firm of Coe and Son, poultry dealers at Bookwalter in Fayette County, was released on $500 bond by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Wednesday pending a hearing assigned for February 4.

Sheriff Ohmer Tate and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, recovered 112 of the stolen fowl at St. Paris last Sunday. They were in a poultry car ready for shipment the next morning.

The chickens had been purchased by the Ridenour Poultry Co., at St. Paris from Coe and Son and Coe was arrested and returned to Xenia Monday afternoon when he was unable authorities say, to give a satisfactory explanation of how the chickens originally came into his possession.

The stolen chickens were of the Rhode Island Red variety and the fact their tails had been bobbed by the owner led to the identification. Two dead chickens discovered in the rear of Coe's poultry establishment were identified by Glass as among those stolen from him. The remaining eleven were unaccounted for and are believed to have been smothered to death at the time they were stolen.

After being advised that the chickens bought from Coe and Son were believed to have been stolen the Ridenour Poultry Co. stopped payment on a check given the Bookwalter firm. The chickens recovered were sold at St. Paris for $161.49 and this money was turned over to Glass.

Why Few Are Fat

Excess fat has been disappearing fast in late years. So fast that excess fat is the exception now. You see that in every circle.

That change is largely due to the discovery that excess fat is largely the result of a gland weakness. A gland whose secretion helps turn food to fuel. So modern physicians, in treating obesity, seek to combat this cause.

Their method is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. Now almost everyone has slender friends to show them the results.

Go do what they did—try Marmola. All druggists supply it at $1 a box, and a book in each box tells you how and why it acts.

AULTMAN ATTENDS MEETING OF COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS

Prof. H. C. Aultman, Greene County school superintendent, was in Columbus Thursday attending a conference of county superintendents at which consideration of uniform methods for distribution of a 265-mill school levy in each county in the state was scheduled to be the chief matter to be taken up by John L. Clifton, state director of education. All county superintendents were eligible to attend the conference.

Each county board of education receives 50 per cent for transportation costs and 37 1/2 per cent for teachers' salaries out of the 265 mills. This is to compensate each board for expenditures made for these purposes and the balance is divided according to a ratio based on aggregate days of attendance.

As in the past, distribution of the fund this year will probably be made by the county auditor, Superintendent Aultman predicted, inasmuch as the law placing distribution of the levy in the hands of boards of education became operative only recently, and because local boards have not agreed upon a schedule for transportation and salaries. However, action will depend upon the outcome of the Columbus conference.

Director Clifton called the conference while school officials, including men and women, are in Columbus Thursday for a general state guidance meeting. The sessions, over which George F. Rightmire, president of Ohio State University, will preside, are being held in the house of representatives.

The address of welcome was delivered in the morning by Governor Myers Y. Cooper and Director Clifton and Prof. H. A. Toops, of Ohio State, were the principal speakers at the opening session.

POLICE CATCH PAIR ROBBING GROCERY; PAROLED TO FATHER

Interrupted by police in the act of breaking into the M. A. Ross grocery at 110 S. Detroit St., about 10:30 o'clock Wednesday night, two brothers, minors, were turned over Thursday morning to juvenile Judge S. C. Wright, who paroled the youths in the custody of their father. It was the first time either boy had been in trouble, police said.

The arrests were made by Patrolmen Charles Thompson and J. E. Craig. Actions of the youths had aroused the suspicions of the officers, who watched their movements.

Shortly after the pair had disappeared into an alley adjoining the grocery, the officers heard a crash of broken glass. One boy had crawled into the grocery through a broken window and his brother, who was apparently standing guard near when the patrolmen came into view. Several shots were fired over his head to scare him and he was captured after a short chase. The youth who had entered the grocery was apprehended as he emerged through the window.

Lindsey Disbarment Grows Out of Stokes Settlement

Judge Ben Lindsey, famous Denver jurist, and father of the "companionate marriage" idea, was disbarred from law practice in Colorado, as an aftermath of the famous Stokes fight waged by Helen Elwood Stokes, Judge Ben Lindsey. (Lower) W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire hotel owner and New York realtor. The children of Mrs. Helen Stokes, about whom the fight circled. Samuel Untermyer, well-known New York lawyer, and counsel for Mrs. Stokes, who gave Judge Lindsey $10,000 as a gift for his services in the famous case.

CAN a gift to reward legal services be construed as a fee? In the opinion of the Supreme Court of the State of Colorado, a gift of money is tantamount to a fee, and because of this opinion, former Judge Lindsey of the Denver Juvenile Court is disbarred from pursuing the practice of law in the State henceforth. The charge against the famous judge is that of "professional misconduct."

When Helen Elwood Stokes brought her action for recognition of her children as heirs in the will of her husband, W. E. D. Stokes, he had transferred his wealth to his son, W. E. D. Stokes, Jr., thus disinheriting his minor children, Muriel and James. Lindsey had previously appointed Mrs. Stokes as legal guardian of the children after the Stokes' matrimonial ship had gone on the rocks, and they were also held as the wards of his court. The attorney general of Colorado charges that Mrs. Stokes sought the aid and counsel of Lindsey in her probate action, and that in accordance with such aid and counsel, the judge, as he was at the time holding office, acted contrary to the ethics of his office. The services of Samuel Untermyer, noted New York lawyer, were secured by Judge Lindsey. It was charged, and the State court was told that he also participated in the negotiations conducted by Untermyer that resulted in a compromise settlement which gave the two children of Mrs. Stokes, approximately $3,000,000.

For this service, in which he claims that he acted merely as a friend of Mrs. Stokes, the noted jurist received a voluntary gift of $37,000 from her, and, according to Mr. Untermyer, Lindsey also received $10,000 from the fee of the famous lawyer, making a total of $47,000 for his good offices.

Judge Lindsey stoutly and indignantly maintains that his conduct throughout the Stokes case was entirely dissociated with his duties as a judge, and that at all times he merely acted as arbitrator and mediator to aid his friend, Mrs. Stokes, without thought of reward or gain thereby. And Samuel Untermyer thinks that "a gross injustice appears to have been done to Judge Lindsey."

"AMOS 'N' ANDY" TWO BUSY BOYS; PLAY HEAVY VARIETY OF ROLES

By FRANCIS F. HEALY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—How would you like to be a goat, dog, judge, prosecuting attorney, defendant, character witness, an officer of a lodge, a fortune teller, a Hindu prince and radio salesman all in the space of fifteen minutes?

Sounds complicated, doesn't it? And it is. This is the task confronting the two highest paid radio entertainers in the United States today, Charles J. Correll and Freeman F. Gosden, known to the radio audience of the nation as Amos 'n' Andy.

Their is an exacting task at times, when each actor is compelled to handle four or five roles himself, for in radio dramatization it is the voice alone, and not make-up, that distinguishes characters. Amos and Andy are the whole works and the only performers Amos even barks like a dog, if necessary.

In Other Roles Correll, for instance, in addition to being Andy, has also the roles of Fred, the landlord, several of the officers of the Mystic Knights of the Sea, and their characters for which his deep bass voice is adapted.

Amos, on the other hand, is the Kingfish, the Prince, the Fortune Teller and many other incidental characters. In many episodes, the boys are kept busy jumping in and out of different roles, often talking to themselves for a five-minute interval.

When a new character is created, Correll and Gosden first decide upon the character and the type of voice he should have. They try several types of voice until one is found. The characters are divided as evenly as possible to allow the boys a breathing space.

Difference in voice characterization is achieved, namely, by changing the voice and partly by changing position in front of the microphone. Correll, for instance, will take the part of Andy by speaking close to the instrument but if he should take the part of some other character, he would dart back perhaps eighteen inches from the microphone.

Amos also moves back and forth changing from the Kingfish to his role as Amos. Anyone watching them and unaware of the necessity of their actions might well think they were insane.

In Court Room Scene In a famous courtroom scene once portrayed, Andy was involved in a breach of promise suit brought against him by the Widow Parker. Ten persons were in the cast. Correll took the part of Andy, attorney for the defense, judge, policeman and county clerk. Gosden was Amos, prosecuting attorney, bailiff and Kingfish. It went over without a hitch with both actors bobbing back and forth like jumping jacks.

But Amos 'n' Andy know their own limitations. Never has Madame Queen's voice, but that of Ruby Taylor, been heard over the radio. The boys are good but they draw the line on a woman's voice. Then, too, they are in vaudeville, and that's something else again. The NBC network, over which the boys are heard, must make special wire arrangements nightly to bring to the radio world the voices of the stars.

Wires and microphones must be connected to the stage of a different city each week so that they may broadcast promptly on the minute.

And if you think the whole business is easy—try it! "Ohhh, sho', sho'—"

ENTHUSIASM FOR RADIO LANDS JOB FOR PRETTY THORA MARTENS

(Editor's Note: This is another of a series of sketches of the most prominent radio artists of the day. Others follow.)

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY
Central Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Perhaps you'll be surprised to hear that Thora Martens is a great big girl. She is, in fact, five feet nine inches tall.

Thora is, mainly, a contralto. But being a versatile young lady, she also acts in sketches. Sometimes she sings solos—sometimes duets.

A Rabid Radio Fan

Before going on the air Thora was a secretary for a time and later did sales work. This was after she was graduated from Senn high school, her home town. Because she was a rabid radio fan the young lady first became interested in going on the air.

Night after night she listened and envied the artists whose voices were reaching so many millions. Finally she gathered up nerve enough to go and ask for an audition. Presto! She got right out of the selling game and took to the air.

Her first work over the radio was in duets with Dorothy Watkins. Since that time she has also been on the stage—in "The Student Prince" at Omaha, Minneapolis, and St. Louis also know Thora. She has appeared before "mikes" in those cities.

Swimming, motoring golf and skating are her favorite sports in the out-of-doors besides shopping. How that girl loves to take a list and go out and see how many bargains she can find!

"I can't resist a sale," she laughed good naturedly. "I think I ought to run a shopping bureau."

AGE NO BAR TO EXECUTIVE

Rather Is An Advantage Declares Speaker At Management Meeting

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 30.—"Age in years as such not only is not a deterrent to the employment of executives, but, in numerous cases, furnishes a positive argument in favor of their employment."

The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

DOG STORY

One of the best dog stories I have read in a long time is "The Honorable Charley," by Philip Curtiss, recently published in a little volume by Harper's. The story originally appeared in Harper's magazine, but I missed it.

This story interests me because Charley, the hero of the tale, reminds me so much of Nero, the big Newfoundland dog who was my playmate when I was a boy on a Kansas farm.

Charley resembles Nero in size and in several of his characteristics, but Charley is absurd and clownish, while Nero was always dignified and sedate.

Nero was a thoroughbred Newfoundland, of gigantic size. We got him from a friend in Wichita when he was a tiny pup. He grew up, lived and died on the farm. So far as I know, he never left the premises.

I am reminded of Nero when the writer of the Charley tale tells how his big hero used to sit on a dog that tried to fight with him.

Nero was much too big and too noble to fight with any other dog. There was no dog within the circle of his acquaintance that was big enough for him to fight. The neighbors across the road had four or five curs, and sometimes all of them would run and snap at Nero. Many times I have seen the big Newfoundland trot along, head up, never even laying back his ears in annoyance, with the pack snapping at his legs, barking and acting perfectly wild.

But sometimes Nero would lose patience. Then he would lay down whatever he was carrying in his mouth, and would knock over the biggest of his tormentors with one swipe of one front paw. While the enemy howled in terror, Nero would sit on him, and with punishing paw upraised, would show all his teeth and roar like a lion. The whole pack of enemy dogs would run for home at sight of this terrifying spectacle, and Nero, arising, would go back and pick up his burden and trot smilingly home.

We had rural mail delivery. Nero would go a quarter of a mile to the crossroads and wait for the carrier. He would come home with the mail carefully between his teeth. Then he would ask for food.

Nero used to fill the woodbox in the kitchen for me. It was my chore, and I hated it. I trained Nero to pick up firewood and bring it right into the kitchen, dropping it into the yawning woodbox.

I think Nero was one of the most intelligent of all dogs. It is my understanding of him that makes me chuckle over this clever story of the big dog Charley.

These conclusions were stated here today at the personnel administration conference of the American Management Association by J. P. Jordan, New York management engineer.

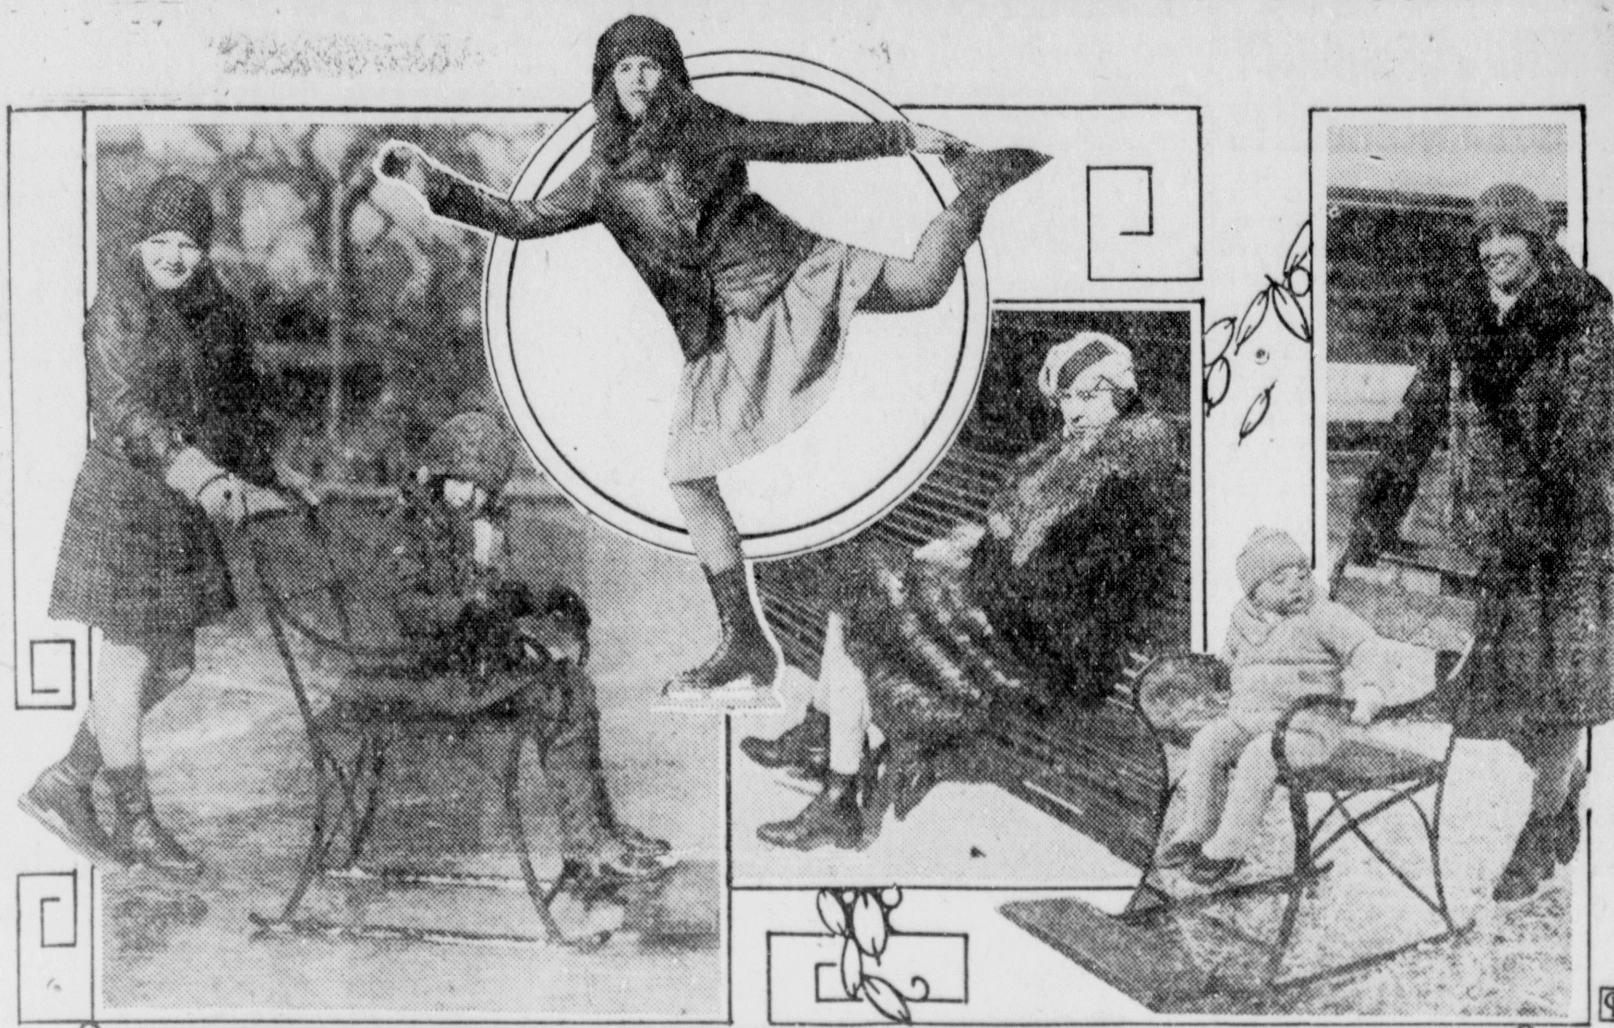

Jordan particularly fixed much of the blame for the difficulty of unemployed executives to secure employment on the men themselves. He said further:

"Any man who has lived carefully, kept up to date in the matter of technical changes and who has not allowed the zest of accomplishment to fade from everyday life can unquestionably obtain employment at almost any age—certainly up to 60."

"What is most often called 'too old' is a state of either mental or physical deterioration or atrophy brought about by the individual himself, which condition begins to become fixed and noticeable around the age of 40."

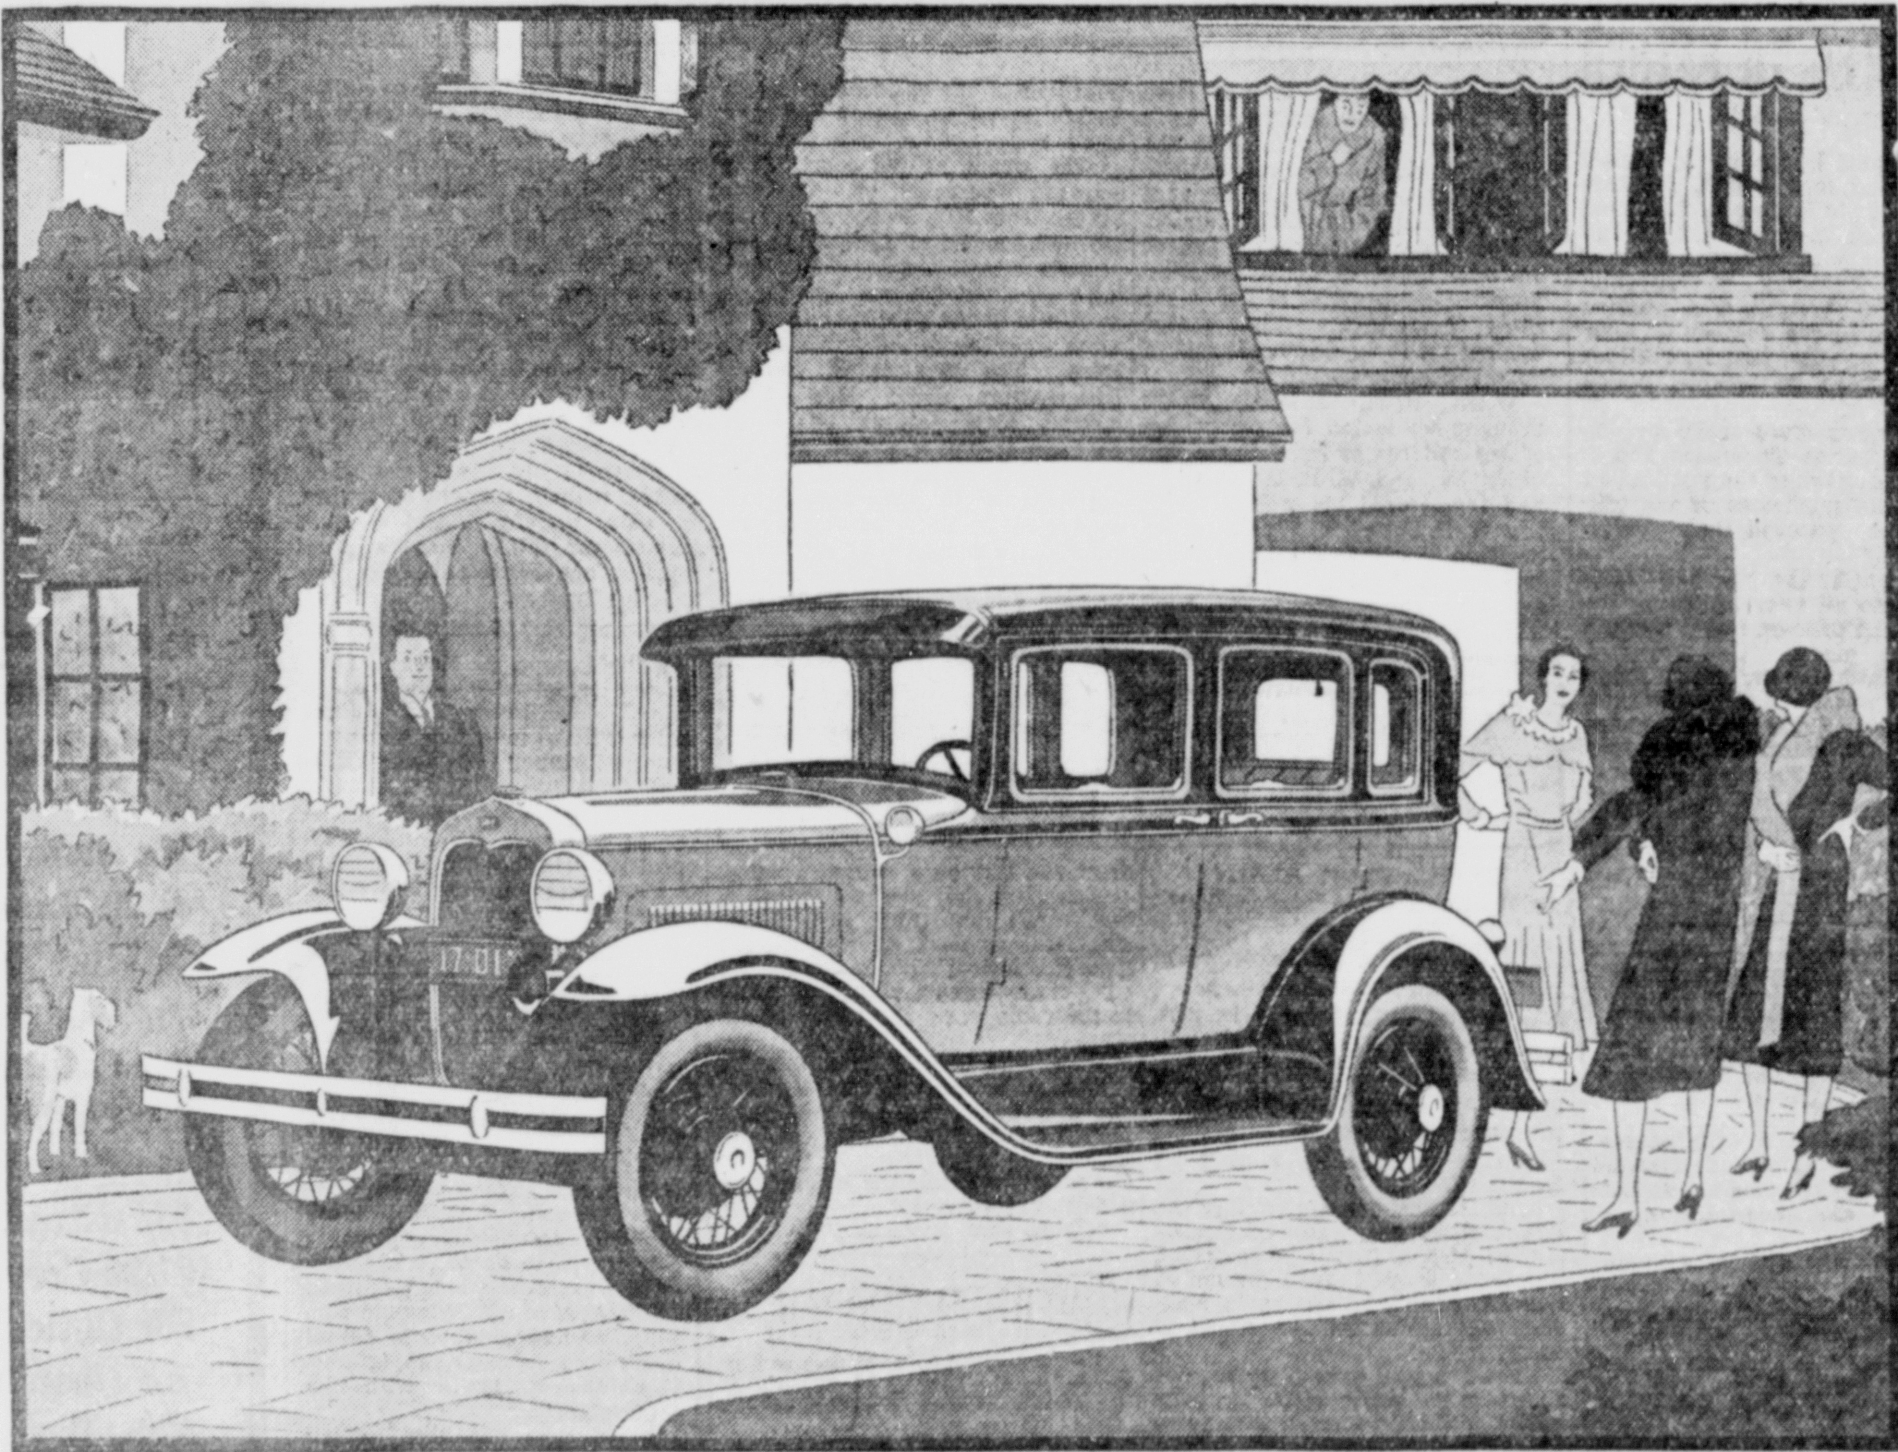

Golf courses, cocktail parties, night clubs and the like tend to bury the executive's talents, Jordan declared, but the executive who "has an open mind, who is alert, who studies and masters the science of human leadership and who plays the game hard," is never out of a job.

New Beauty for the New Ford

THE NEW FORD TOWN SEDAN

In the Town Sedan you see a distinguished example of the unbroken sweep of line which adds so much charm to all the new, roomy Ford bodies. Radiator, hood, cowl, lower roof line, fenders, wheels—every point of design reflects the new style and beauty that have been placed within the means of every one. All of the new Ford cars are finished in a variety of colors.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD

THE introduction of the new Ford bodies has set a high standard of motor car value.

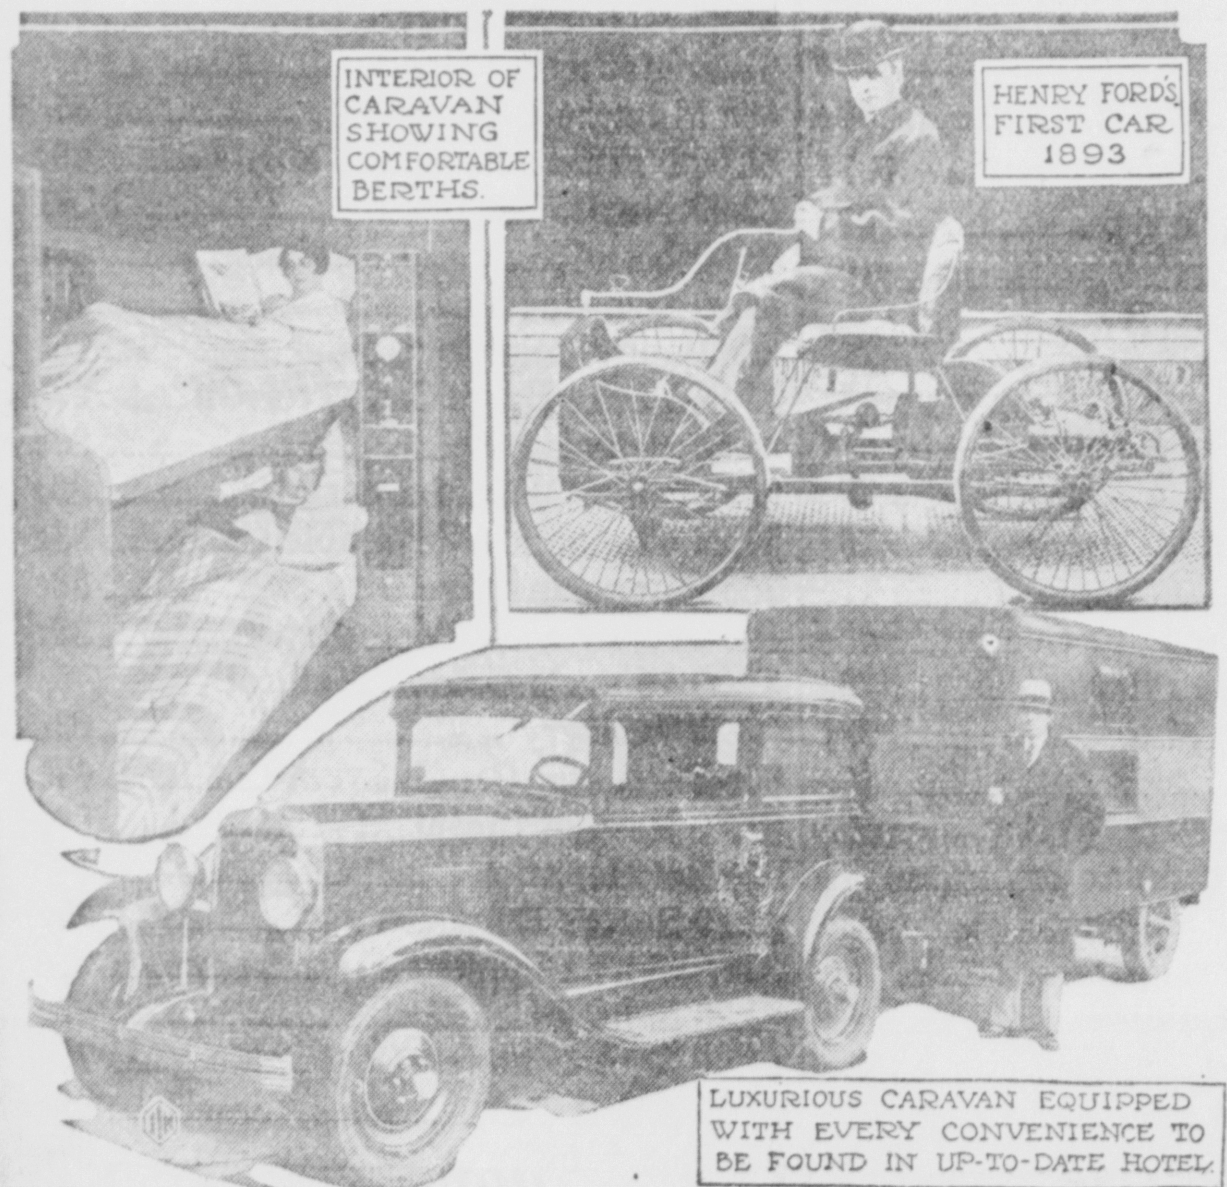

From the new deep radiator to the tip of the curving rear fender, there is an unbroken sweep of line—a flowing grace of contour gaining added charm from the rich and attractive colors.

You will take a real pride in the smart style and fresh new beauty of the Ford just as you will find an ever-growing satisfaction in its safety, comfort, speed, acceleration, ease of control, reliability and economy. In appearance, as in mechanical construction, craftsmanship has been put into mass production. New beauty has been added to outstanding performance.

A feature of unusual interest is the use of Rustless Steel for the radiator shell, head lamps, cowl finish strip, hub caps, tail lamp and other exposed metal parts. This steel will not rust, corrode or tarnish and will retain its bright brilliance for the life of the car. Here, as in so many other important details, you see evidence of the enduring quality that has been built into the new Ford.

The Rise of the Automobile

YOU may now put the back-seat driver to sleep—in a trailer attached to your car! One of the most interesting exhibits at the Automobile Show staged at Grand Central Palace, New York City, is a luxurious caravan attached to a sedan car. But what a caravan it is, with more trick gadgets for comfort and convenience than were ever used in even the most luxurious of caravans.

The trailer is equipped with four berths, running water, electric lights, and special ventilation apparatus. In fact, it has all the comforts of an up-to-date hotel room. This hotel room on wheels is no wider than an ordinary car, yet the berths used are quite slumber-inducing. Of course, there's a trick to it, and it is that provoking appearance. But they went, and that was all that was required of a gasoline contraption in those dim, dark days when an automobile costume for ladies meant a long "dust" coat, and a hat with goggles and a thick veil.

Henry Ford often refers to his first car, which made successful trial runs in 1893. It was driven by a twin cylinder, four cycle "water cooled engine, and it made from 25 to 30 miles an hour. The first of the crop of old-fashioned Fords was manufactured in 1903. Since then, of course, the Ford car has graduated into the popular luxury class. The motor magnate cherishes all the early models of his machine, and proudly claims that they are still in running order.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 29.—Austin Wylie got his first taste of the big-time fighting, bleating and dithering, playing a fiddle in the 135th artillery band on the frozen fields of Flanders during the World War.

Rumor has it that he started out as a tuba player. But, the thing was too darned heavy to carry while dodging zowies and what-not. So, being a versatile young man, the present air jazz orchestra director took to the handy violin.

Even before that, Austin played in dancing academies and such here. And he played in Janet Stewart's orchestra. We might add that Austin says he wouldn't have fiddled his way through the World War if he hadn't been too young to get into it any other way. But he says he felt like Nero, fiddling while Rome burned.

After the war Wylie returned to Cleveland and organized the Wylie and Wahl orchestra. The partnership lasted a short while—and Austin decided to get reckless and try things on his own hook.

He is a small young man, dark hair, dark, almost black, eyes and fine features. A great many people have the impression that Austin is a foreign descent. But, he is a home-cooking, everyday American. He was born in Cleveland.

His first job as a musician was in the pit at the old American Theater here. Later he played on the lake steamer Eastland, that came to such a tragic end. Then he flitted to the coal fields of Pennsylvania as an engineer's assistant.

The coal fields did not particularly appease his hunger for the artistic in music. But he struggled along with his job for nine months. He came home for New Year's and was hired to play for a dance on New Year's eve. This, he says, was his first dance engagement.

Soldiers May Remember
Some of you sojor boys may remember Austin as that lively little lad who tooted when all of you should have been sleeping at Camp Sheridan, Ala. With Ev Jones, later known as the "Jolly Jester," they formed a band to play at military balls before going to France.

Wylie also has the distinction of being one of the first bands to broadcast. He is celebrated on the air. Almost every one who has a radio has heard him at one time or another.

Channel buoys

WHAT would modern navigation do without the channel buoys—those floating markers that keep ships off the shoals? In a very real sense, the advertisements in this paper are channel buoys, placed for your protection—for the safeguarding of the family expenditures.

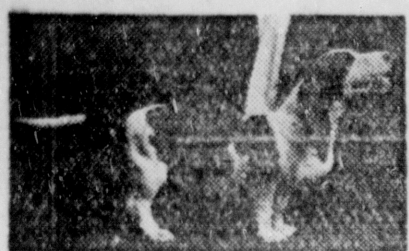

These advertisements are the signed statements of reputable firms who seek your patronage on the single basis of giving value for every dollar spent. They are honest statements, the only kind an advertiser can use and remain an advertiser.

People who get the most for their dollar in the market-places are those who keep an eye on the channel buoys. Day by day, they follow the advertisements to learn what and where to buy to the best advantage. Make this a habit. Study the advertisements, in the interest of shrewder buying.

The advertisers in this paper have charted the channels of buying for you.

ANCIENT BREED OF HUNTING DOGS RAISED AT SMITH KENNELS AT SPRING VALLEY

Carl E. Smith, of Spring Valley, O., teacher in Beavercreek High School, has an interesting story line in raising and selling each year several representative specimens of that ancient and aristocratic breed of hunting hounds, the Basset hound, part of which are raised in his kennels in or near Spring Valley, and part in branch kennels in other states.

By careful study of this interesting and unique old breed he has come to be an authority, and has written for practically all the leading sporting journals on the subject, as well as general articles on kennel practice, training and care. He is author of "Training the Rabbit Hound," which book was purchased by the Hunter, Trader, Trapper Co., of Columbus, and is now in its second successful edition. Two other books on sporting subjects have recently been sold to the same company but are not out, and a fourth is being prepared now. Besides his prose productions, Mr. Smith is the author of some twenty collections of verse, one of which is in the December "Sports and Hobbies" article in January "Outdoor Life," and a picture of one of the Basset hounds from the Smith Basset Kennels is in the January "Hunter, Trader, Trapper".

Mr. Smith and his brother, George H. Smith, Xenia attorney, have had Basset hounds for hunting purposes for several years. About five years ago they decided to import some of the best individuals from France, the original home of the Basset, and also from England, where it has reached a very fine development. With the aid of some friends who joined them in their interest, they imported three individuals from each country, including the winner of the 1926 Paris show, Baillet's Corvette.

With these individuals for breeding stock added to the Bassetts they already had, they have had an interesting development of distinctively American strain, with careful mating. Distemper, the base of the kennels, hit the kennel last winter for the first time and wiped out the accumulation of considerable breeding stock and stock for sale, and other losses have been suffered such as the loss of the great and famous male, Starridge Rastus, from intestinal infection. The Basset Hound is a heavy bodied, low, bench legged hound of such ancient origin that his lineage is partly lost in traditional origin, but is generally considered to trace back to the old French bloodhound and the St. Hubert hounds of the seventh century. He has been raised in the royal and titled kennels of France for several centuries, and was introduced in England the latter half of the last century by Sir Everett Millais, Sir George Creel, and others.

The king and queen kept a sizeable pack, the Sandringham pack, the Lord North, Croxton Smith and many others are devotees of the Basset. The Dalby Hall pack and the Walhampton pack in England are probably the most famous, from the latter of which the three importations were made to the Smith's Basset Hound Kennels, and a descendant of the Dalby Hall strain has recently been added.

The hounds are used as slow trailers of deer, hares, rabbits and for far dogs and for flushing and securing wounded pheasants and other game birds. They are from eleven to fifteen inches high generally but are heavy boned and weigh from forty to fifty pounds. The Basset is known as the most musical of hounds, possessing a bell-toned voice and is docile and of kind disposition.

Carl Smith is shown above and the dog is his Hermite Prince, now dead, but typical of this hunting strain.

LEAGUE DIRECTOR TO ADDRESS ROTARY

JOHN S. MOORE

Next Tuesday's meeting of the Xenia Rotary Club will be addressed by John S. Moore, Dayton, recently named regional director for the League of Nations Association for Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Mr. Moore gained a wide knowledge of foreign conditions through three trips to Europe and one to Mexico as a newspaper and magazine correspondent. At Geneva he spent much time in the gallery and among the 200 and more newspaper men, making note of the attitudes and reactions of the many delegates and visitors. Knowledge of the League thus obtained and the interest he manifest in the program led to his being offered the regional directorship. He will tell of his impressions as obtained from the seat in the gallery as to the possibilities of world peace.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

AVOID THE THREAT of the weight of age

AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*

By refraining from over-indulgence

You men who would keep trim and fit... you women who covet the tantalizing curves of the truly modern figure—when tempted to do yourself too well, light a Lucky instead. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. Eat healthfully but not immoderately. When your eyes are bigger than your stomach, light a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence, if you would maintain that lithe, youthful figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so "TOASTING" not only removes impurities but adds to the flavor and improves the taste.

"Coming events cast their shadows before"

"It's toasted"

*Be Moderate!... Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for Lucky" instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

CAPTAIN HAYS WILL ASSUME CHARGE OF HOME HERE MONDAY

Captain Harold L. Hays, Washington C. H., recently appointed superintendent of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home here, succeeded Major C. V. Burton, Cleveland, resigned, is expected to officially assume his new duties at the institution next Monday, according to Prof. J. E. Balmer, acting superintendent.

Accompanied by John L. Clifton, state director of education, who is in charge of re-organization of the educational system at the Home, and Mrs. Clifton, Captain and Mrs. Hays paid their first visit to the institution, since the former's appointment, last Saturday.

February 1 is the date assigned by the Home trustees for Captain Hays to enter upon his new duties as superintendent but as it will be necessary for him to be in Chicago Saturday and Sunday, the change was postponed until Monday.

Captain and Mrs. Hays will move their household goods into the superintendent's quarters in the administration building at the Home this week, a truck being sent from the state institution to transport their belongings from Columbus. Mrs. Hays and their infant son will take up their residence at the Home Saturday.

Captain Hays, the new superintendent, has held a position with the state civil service commission.

HARMON AWARDS GO TO 52 BOY SCOUTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 20.—Fifty-two Boy Scouts were selected today as winners of the 1928 Harmon Scout scholarship awards for 1929. All of the winners are Eagle Scouts who did unusual service to their home communities in scholarship attainments.

The highest rating was won by Harry Mayeda, 18, of Sacramento, California, a Scout of Japanese parentage. It was announced the work he accomplished in training Japanese-American boys for citizenship won him the friendship of Governor Young of California.

One Negro Scout, Eugene Lloyd Mitchell, of Findlay, O., was elected.

Customs Patrolman In "Dry" Shooting

Clare B. Hopper, of the customs border patrol, shot, perhaps fatally, Walter Grund, 27, of Detroit, is not expected to live. He was found lying in a rowboat which had drifted to shore three miles from the shooting. No liquor was found in his craft. Hopper explained that Grund refused to halt when called to surrender.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps Her So Much

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I sure recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman in the condition I was in. I was so weak and run down that I could hardly stand up. I could not eat and was full of misery. A friend living on Arcade Avenue told me about this medicine and after taking ten bottles my weakness and nervousness are all gone. I feel like living again. I am still taking it until I feel strong like before. You may use this letter as a testimonial." Mrs. ELIZABETH TOSO, 14913 Hale Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

New Jersey Baby Farm Victims

These six children, ranging in age from five days to sixteen months, are shown in the Elizabeth Hospital, Elizabeth, N. J., after being taken away from a "baby farm" suffering from neglect and sharing cribs with many dogs. Two women who ran the "farm" are being held on charges of cruelty to children. Police are seeking the parents of the babies through a record of payments found in the filthy house where they were being confined.

Poems that Live

THE BRACELET: TO JULIA

WHY I tie about thy wrist,
Julia, this silken twist;
For what other reason 't
But to show thee how, in part,
Thou my pretty captive art?
But thy bond-slave is my heart:
'Tis but silk that bindeth thee,
Snap the thread and thou art
free;
But 'tis otherwise with me:
I am bound and fast bound, so
Just from thee I cannot go;
If I could, I would not so.

Just the usual Ohio Winter ...

... and it's mighty tough on motor oil ...

But never in winters past have you had a motor oil made especially to meet these swirling weather changes ...

New SOHIO MOTOR OIL
free from harmful wax

Expect These Results With New Sohio Motor Oil In Your Crankcase:

Easier starting—less drain on battery.
Less need for slow warming up.
Full, smooth power—unfailing piston seal.
Reduced carbon formation.
Less wear on moving parts.

MONDAY'S cold—Tuesday's not—Wednesday's chilly—Thursday's hot! And so it goes right through the winter. No wonder ordinary motor oils find life difficult in Ohio. No wonder New Sohio Motor Oil has gained such success during its first season. It was developed especially to meet Ohio's punishing weather changes.

New Sohio doesn't grow sluggish when the weather grows cold—doesn't lose its body when the thermometer rises. Cold motors spin easily and under intense heat at high speeds there's no breaking of that vital protecting film between moving parts.

This unusual flexibility and sturdiness has been given New Sohio Motor Oil by a newly developed refining process which frees it from harmful wax to a degree never before thought possible. First it is chilled to 50° below zero. Then the harmful wax content is whirled away. The result: an oilier oil—smoother—longer lasting—ready to meet Ohio's severest weather changes better than they've ever been met before.

Yet with all its extra quality New Sohio Motor Oil costs only 30c per quart.

Listen to the Sohioans every Tuesday Evening at 7:30 P. M. ... WTAM

FOR THE LOVE OF PAT BY C. L. WEBB © 1929

READ THIS FIRST:

After the signing of the armistice Lieutenant Rex Dillard, Dr. Frank Gordon, Nurse Margery Lynne and Patricia Blair sail for New York bent on thwarting the plans of Herbert Maxwell, guardian of Patricia and her twin brother, who seeks to do them out of their fortune. Maxwell has taken Jimmy to New York with him, the boy suffering from aphasia due to shell shock. Another man, posing as Jimmy, is to be used by Maxwell in obtaining half the Blair fortune. Nurse Margery Lynne, after seeing Jimmy on a New York street, is slugged, coming to later in a hospital. The friends prepare Patricia for her ordeal when she must face the fake Jimmy's half of the fortune until he is discovered.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII

The brown eyes looking into Margery's smiled through a mist of tears that veiled them. Then, all at once, an odd expression began to glimmer in their humid depths. The pretty mouth straightened, Pat sat up.

"I just thought of something," she announced, with vast solemnity, glancing around as if bidding everyone to pay close attention. "Rex said I must prove this sub isn't my brother—that to do so I must first produce the real Jimmy Blair. Well, just listen, please: 'When I was fifteen I was stricken with appendicitis and was operated upon. At the time it was discovered that my heart was on the right side—that I was dextra hearted—that is, my heart wasn't on the left side, where hearts usually are located. Six months afterward Jimmy had his appendix removed and, strangely enough, the doctors discovered his heart to be on the right side, too—that is, the same as mine, not on the left side. The two cases were considered quite remarkable at the time, we being twins. The doctor who operated on me was our family physician, Dr. Gardner.

"Now, supposing that Dr. Gardner were to come here, examine this sub of Maxwell's—that is, subject him to an X-ray examination—and find that he still possesses his appendix and that his heart is not on the right side, but on the left, where the normal person's heart is located? Wouldn't that prove he wasn't James K. Blair?" She turned to Dr. Gordon. "You ought to be able to answer that question, Doctor Frank," she added, smiling at him. "Wouldn't it prove my case for me?"

"I'll say it would, Pat," replied the young doctor, with a warmth of enthusiasm unusual to him, and the look he gave her held a new admiration. "I don't think there would be any question about it. Those two operations, your brother's and yours, are on record, doubtless, in the hospital where they were performed and a copy of them could be obtained and brought here by your family doctor. He would come, wouldn't he, if you asked him?"

"I'm sure he would," answered the girl, the light of a new determination shining in her brown eyes. She turned to the lieutenant. "He too, was smiling his admiration of her ingenious idea.

"What do you think, Rex?" she asked. "And you, Margie?" she added, smiling at the two in turn. "I think the same as Frank!" replied the lieutenant, with quick diplomacy.

"So do I!" chimed in Margery, a loyal enthusiasm in voice and manner. "How did you come to think of such a clever thing, dear?"

"Oh, I—" She hesitated, flushing at the very apparent tribute that she knew was absolutely honest. "It really wasn't clever, you know. The thought just came to me, that's all."

"Of course," said Dillard, reflectively, "we've got to wait until we know just what Maxwell's game really is before we can do anything toward checking him. Tomorrow ought to give us a pretty fair line on the situation. I'll see the lawyer the first thing in the morning. Pat, and put your idea up to him. And I think you'd better write this family doctor of yours—send him a night message and find out for sure if he'll come to New York at once. Instruct him to get a record of the two operations and bring them with him. If Maxwell pulls the stunt we're looking for tomorrow, then our lawyer can get a copy of proceedings in the legacy transfer until your doctor arrives."

He considered the group individually, then collectively. The old year had rung out and the New Year rung in when the two men donned their overcoats in preparation for departure. Pat bade them a final "Happy New Year" at the foot of the stairs leading up to her room, but Margery accompanied them as far as the vestibule.

FRENCH AND BRITISH ARGUMENT REFERRED TO STEERING GROUP

would be continued competition within categories."

Thus after a fortnight of private negotiations, the conference can only be said to be just starting on its real work.

The only note which displayed the slightest bit of discordance at today's session was the insistence of Foreign Minister Grandi that the primary duty of the conference was to determine first the ratios assigned to each power and then their total tonnage and his service of notice that Italy reserved the right not to agree to anything until there has been a decision on this point.

This was not considered as serious as the whole tenor of the sessions was conciliatory.

It was left to the American delegates to produce the oil of compromise in the global tonnage versus categories controversy. Secretary of State Stimson took the initiative in making a resolution referring the controversy to the committee and Ambassador Gibson made the most conciliatory speech of the session.

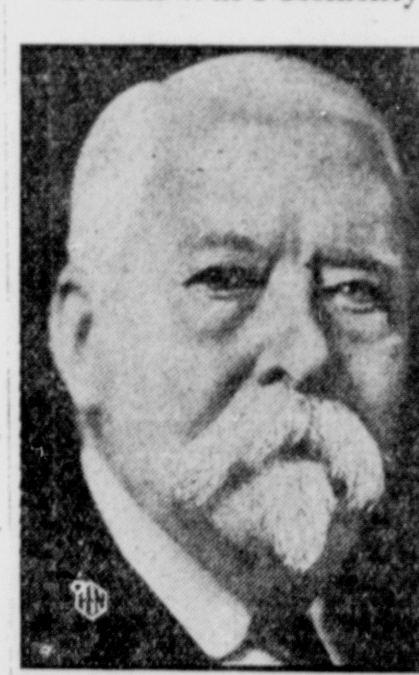

In the first real conflict at the conference, America stood in a neutral position while urging a spirit of compromise.

Ambassador Gibson's frank statement that the United States favored categorical limitation but would not force its views down the throats of other countries was received with the warmest praise by all.

The American members of the steering committee probably will be Col. Stimson and Ambassador Gibson although there may be substitutions from time to time.

The next plenary session will be held when the committee makes sufficient progress to justify such a session.

COUNSEL FOR OWNER SEEKS INJUNCTION IN APPEALS COURT

were installed at various places to stimulate trade and are legal.

The petition argues that the checks received from the machines are redeemed in trade only at a value of 5 cents each only at the place of business of the merchant in which the machine is being exhibited.

The vending machines operated in Greene County are of two types, the petition explains. On the face of the first type appears the following inscription:

"Deposit 5 cent coin and receive a 5 cent package of candy mint. With the purchase you will receive coupons which if not received under restrictions herein will be redeemable in trade only at the value of 5 cents only."

"Restrictions." "Operation of this machine with anything but the necessary coin or making two or more consecutive purchases herein positively prohibited."

Under these restrictions Zimmerman claims that each player is limited to playing a vending machine one time.

On the other type of machine this notice appears:

"Your nickle buys a package, 5 cents. Watch the reels and have your fortune told, 5 cents. The tokens received from the vendor have no value, but may be used to replace the vendor for the customer's sole amusement. A package of confectionery sends with each 5 cents. Confectionery not vendued with amusement taken."

On both types of machines, the plaintiff avers, there is a small indicator on the face, which, before a person plays, indicates by numerals whether or not a person playing the machine will receive anything in addition to a package of mints.

The mints are of standard size and package, are of good quality, are sold at the same price as mints of similar make and size throughout the country, and at a price not in excess of the price generally charged by merchants, it is claimed.

Zimmerman declares that he had installed two machines of the second type at Rest Haven Park and that the sheriff arrested Mrs. Nora Duellman, proprietress, who subsequently pleaded guilty to a gambling charge and was fined. The two machines found at her place of business were confiscated and ordered destroyed.

Zimmerman complains that confiscation of the machines is ruining his business, which he holds of a lawful nature.

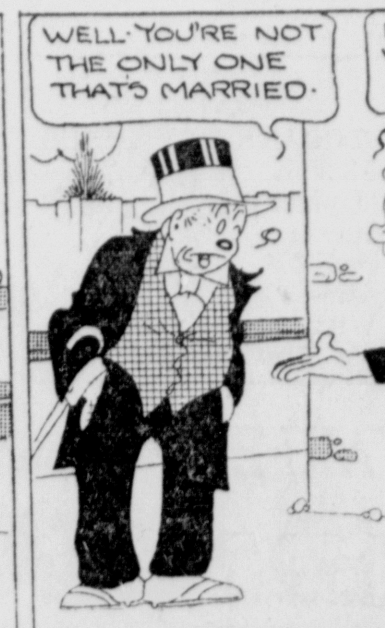

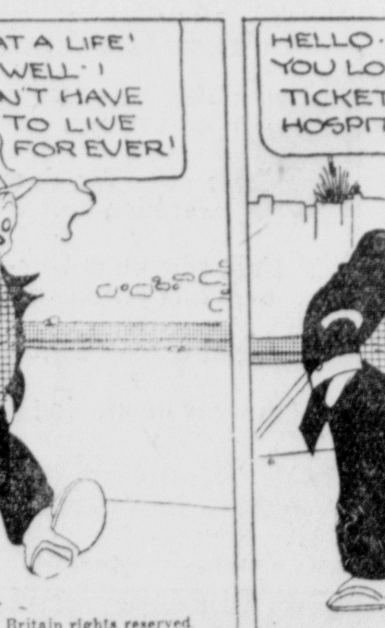

Attorney Johnson announced that a similar suit designed to test the legality of certain types of mint-vending machines was filed in Dayton last week and that Common Pleas Judge Patterson granted a temporary injunction, prohibiting further confiscation of the machines.

Lacks Navy Chief in Defense of Coast Guard

Representative Warren, Democrat, of North Carolina, has come to the defense of the recently abused Coast Guard and declares that the alleged remarks made by Secretary of the Navy Adams in a Boston speech were a "deliberate insult and slur" against that organization. According to a newspaper dispatch, the navy chief was quoted as saying that the men who fired on the rum runner "Black Duck," killing three of the crew, "not navy men but coast guardsmen."

BRINGING UP FATHER

By GEORGE McMANUS

The Theater

The claim that sound picture productions are responsible for first bringing Broadway and Hollywood within snubbing distance is eight years wrong, according to reports emanating from Monterey, ancient California city.

It was in Sailor Jack Swan's saloon in "Old Monterey", which today has metamorphosed into a tea room, that dramatic talent from New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco first swapped grease paint behind the curtain, such as it was.

On this crude stage in Swash-bucklin, Jack's theater-saloon, history has it that the daring Lotta Crabtree, playing in "Nan, the Good-For-Nothing", panicked her audience by dashing on the stage and pulling on her fallen stockings at a time when a mere glimpse of an ankle made many a "hearty" take a kick at the chandelier.

Three companies of New York Volunteers had drifted up to Monterey at the close of the Mexican War, the yarn goes. For diversion they resorted to such games as grabbing a greased game-cock buried in the ground up to its neck while riding pell-mell on horseback, or staring bear and bull fights behind the old Pacific House, a combination court house, jail and boarding house.

Lacking diversion at night, they organized a group of players and staged outdoor performances. When old Jack Swan blew into town, the soldier players induced him to let them build a stage in one end of his sailor boarding house and saloon, which he built of adobe. A heavy wooden partition was hung above the stage and was raised or lowered by means of pulleys to serve as a drop curtain. Sometimes it dropped before an act ended. The thirty ones in the audience would then file into the bar for a "carry-over" until the curtain was adjusted. Some of the actors thought Jack Swan had something to do with the faulty drops.

About this time a group of strolling players, giving outdoor performances in Los Angeles, were attracted north by alluring reports of gold strikes. They got as far as Monterey and teamed up with the New York soldier thespians and other actors who had floated there. Such pulse-quickeners as

The World And All BY CHARLES A. DRISCOLL PERSONS AND THINGS

William Howard Taft is one of the most interesting Americans. He has had about the most satisfactory career that it's possible for a public man to have in this country. He was president as long as he wanted to be president, and he has held almost all the elective and appointive jobs that one man, singled out by fortune as its favorite, could expect to hold.

He has lived a long time, and seems to be in good health still. And for his old age he has the most conspicuously honorable position that any American can po-sess—chief justice of the supreme court of the United States.

Charles Lindbergh is another eminent American. And I can't imagine two individuals more unlike than Lindbergh and Taft. Yet the American people love and respect both of them.

Lindbergh made his reputation in a few hours, risking his life and accomplishing a dramatic success. Having won fame and glory, he kept them unsullied. He didn't make a fool of himself, as so many heroes have done.

Lindbergh is very young, and he has command of about the best collection of opportunities that ever confronted any American at his age. He may yet make for himself a career that will be as full of public honors as that of any man who has lived.

Admiral George Dewey and Richmond Pearson Hobson were the great national heroes produced by the Spanish-American war. No body stood out of the scene during the World war as did these two some years earlier.

Dewey achieved unpopularity within a year or so of his victory, and Hobson made himself a comic bit by going in for wholesale kissing when he returned from his exploit.

Few who achieve sudden glory ever make important careers for themselves. Taft is one whose mild glory has grown steadily with the years, though a very long and useful life. Lindbergh is one who got his crown early in life, by a single act of heroism, and apparently knew instinctively how to stand up under the weight of the glory. America produces all kinds of eminent men and women, because the opportunities in America are so various and so numerous.

There is Taft and there is Lindbergh. And in high school, on a farm, or delivering groceries today there probably is a boy who will make for himself a career comparable to either of these, and altogether different.
